Dare to . . .

Alameda High dared to be different this year than from any other year. For one thing, students greeted the first day of school enthusiastically and dived readily into the year's studies and activities.

"There was an extremely positive opening to school," noticed Instructional Vice-Principal Betty Ruark. "The students were involved academically."

Two new courses were added to the advanced placement strand: Physics and government. In the tenth grade, practical education was integrated with both the Eureka computer and the counseling center for the first time.

In addition to academic courses, AHS maintained a strong journalism and drama department. The music department also emerged with a whole note. For the first time in many years, students saw the new flag team in action and heard the marching band as it elevated the Hornet spirit. by Desmond Chin

Modern Bards - Yumi Takayama, Nicole Gunderson, and Gloria Ahn sing and recite Greek poetry as they munch on peanut-butter and jelly sandwiches.

What now? - Checking on her students, Julie Roemer feels that she can't leave the class for even ten minutes. Ms. Roemer taught two languages: English French.

"Most schools are crammed. AHS is spread out with the old and new buildings."

Jeff DeWolf, 10

"The AP classes offered here are worth it. They challenge students to do their best."

Christine Lee, 11

"There's no place where we as unique individuals have joined to share our lives."

Keith Koo, 12

"I never had open campus before. It gives me forty minutes of free time to do whatever I want."

Victor Baquero, 10

Pride of the school - Sophomore Jeanette Journeay displays the marching band uniform and baton.

So soon? - Julie Haberkorn attempts to ask Dr. Wheelwright if she can use the PA system.

"There seems to be so many different kinds of people in this school. We're all so unique but we get along."

Dawn Gray, 12

"The students have a lot of spirit. There's a lot of support for the athletic teams."

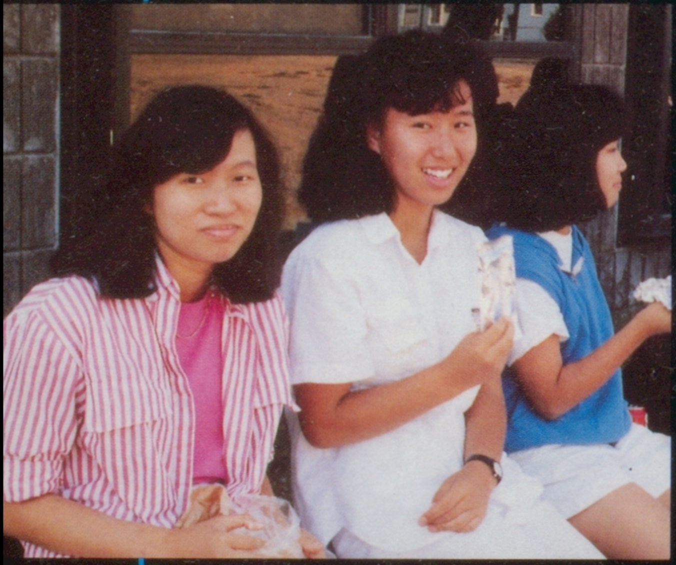
Jose Lara, 12

"The teachers do a good job. They are aware of the students' potential and grows along with them."

Milt Werner, Admin. Vice-Principal

"The people are themselves, not phony, and I like it."

Cherrie Prado, 9



Want a bite? - Jenny Sio and Eun Pak nibble sandwiches as fast as they can in 40 minutes.

Presenting the greatest show on Earth - Ray Sunia welcomes the class of '91 to AHS.

. . . be Different

"They've gotten involved," complimented Principal Dr. Gretchen Wheelwright. Certainly the faculty and students have given their best to AHS whether it was correcting exam papers or planning Spirit week.

According to Administrative Vice-Principal Milt Werner, the students had a tremendous ability. They took advantage of every new opportunity open to them in the AP, music, and athletic programs. One could see fundraising for trips and expenses.

The faculty was strong in content and consisted of a diversified and creative staff. Teachers stimulated the students' minds and helped them perform skits in Spanish and French, argue against the tradiational voting process, and measure the acceleration of rollercoasters.

"Most teachers were willing to put in extra time to help students," said Wheelwright. And they did. —by Desmond Chin

DARE TO BE UNITED

Class of 1988

Welcome '91

On Wednesday, September 2, 1987, the class of 1991 slowly meandered through the doors of the Alameda High School gymnasium.

The day began when the school administrators, Dr. Wheelwright, Mr. Werner, and Mrs. Ruark welcomed the class of 1991. Next came a skit about high school life performed by the school officers, then the cheerleaders led a cheer. Last came a tour of the large campus which confused most of the freshmen.

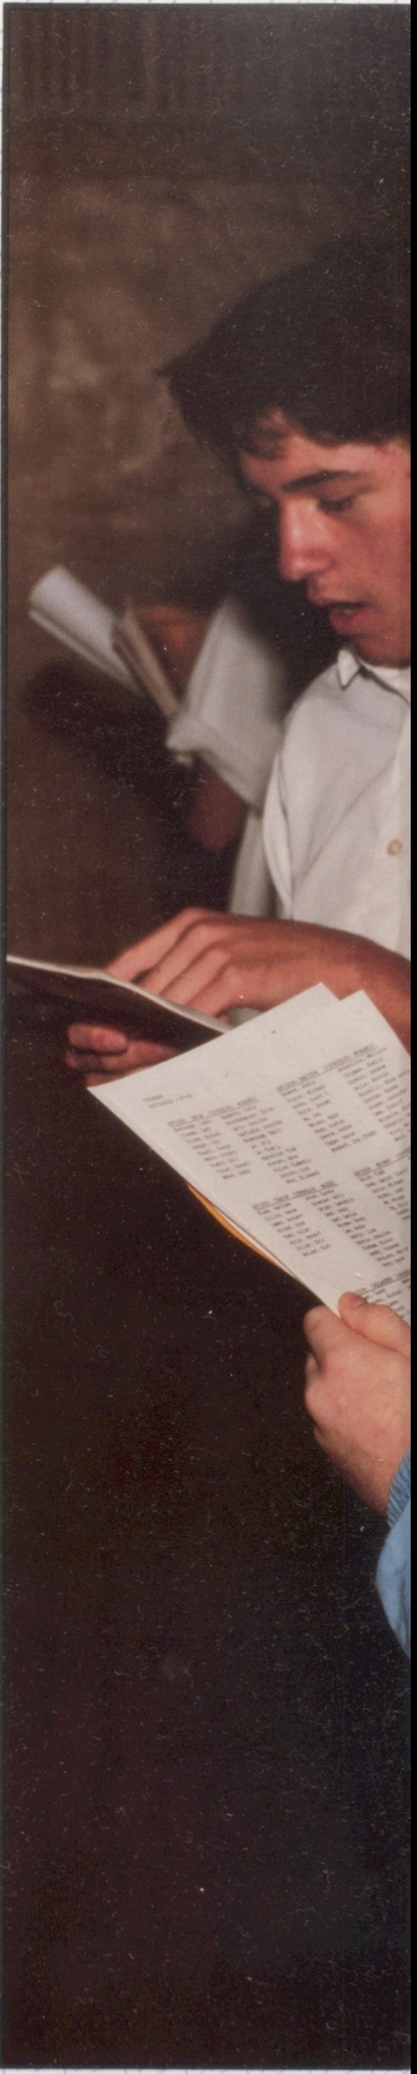
"The campus tour was confusing, but the leaders of my group cleared it up a little," said Todd Brick, who now finds his way around the school with no problem.

"We were busy the whole time, and everything was a little confusing," said Trina Ratto.

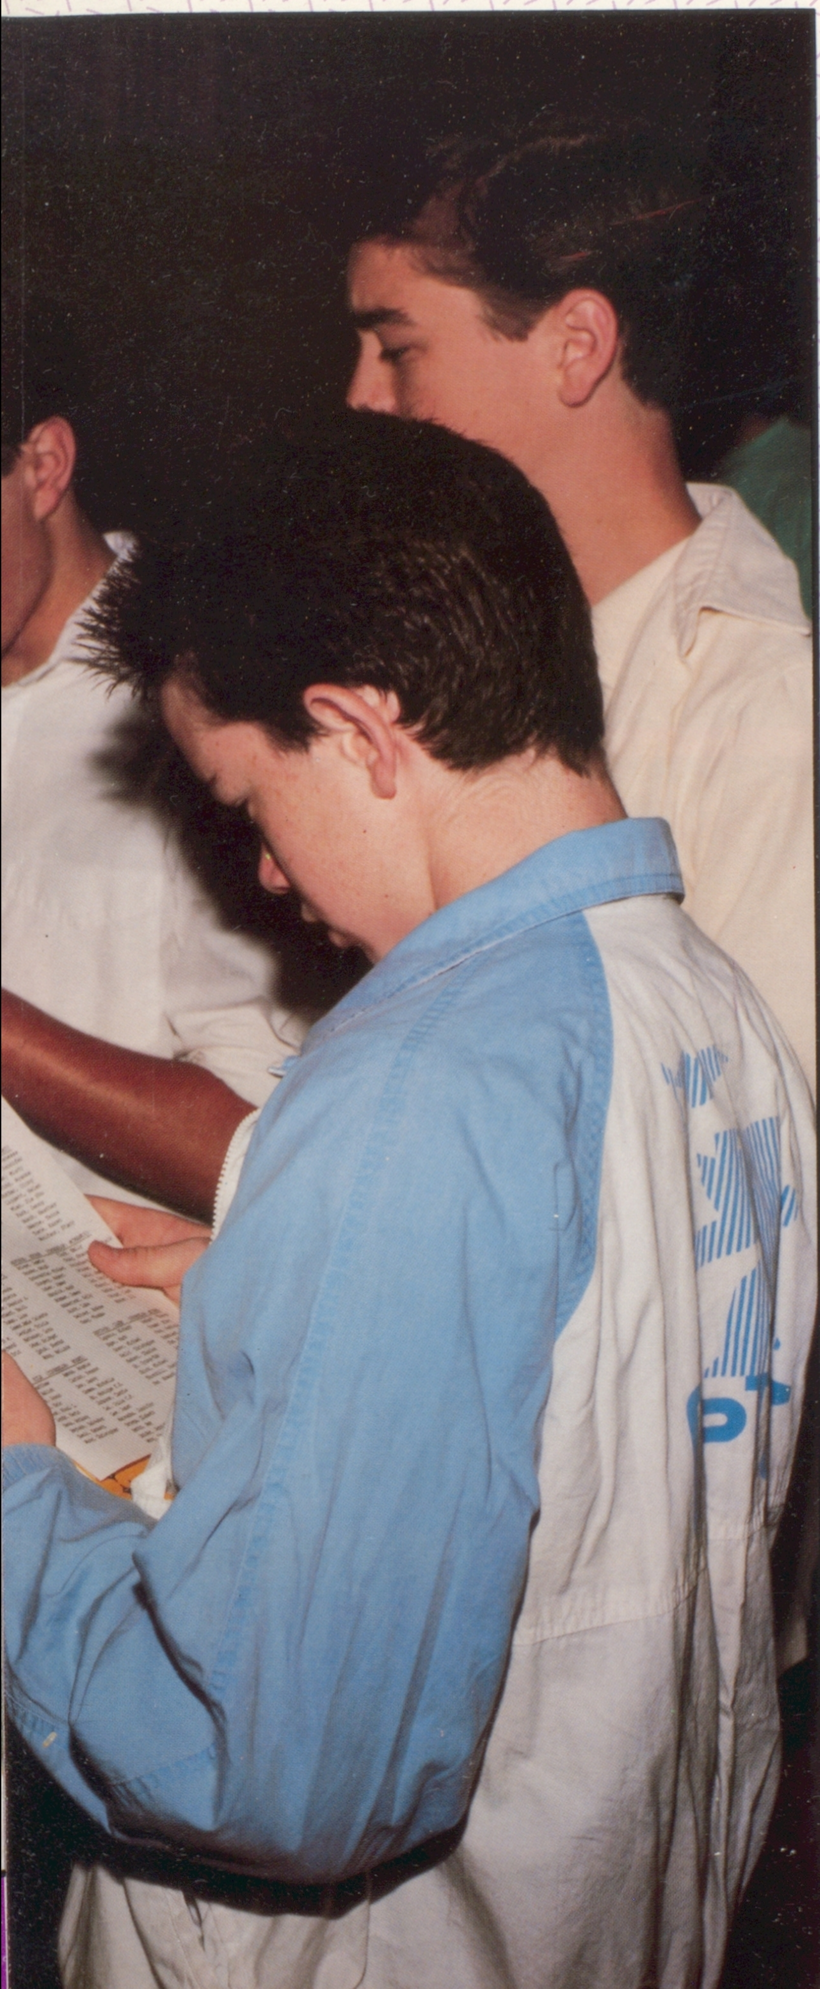
And the freshmen were very busy. They had to pick up their schedules, their locker numbers and combinations, get their I.D. pictures taken, and some even bought their yearbooks! — by Lynnette Dignon

Gimmie a break! - Freshman Jenny Young, Maureen Runyon and Su Kim listen intently to some of the strict rules of AHS.

Listen Up! - Denise Gremminger announces the skit preformed by Ray Sunia, Ray Kang, Heather Dillon, Jennea Weber, Coleen Durham, Keith Koo.



Lost boys - Freshmen Ben Ferrao, Joe Kunath, and Khael Kendall scan the list of advisors.



Hurry up! - The class of 1991 waits for the presentation to begin.

Hallway Express

The bell rang and student bodies poured out of various classes. Whether it was a short sprint up the stairs or the marathon from upstairs in the new building to upstairs in the old building, we all had to weave around people standing in the middle of the hallways talking as well as dodging bags and elbows. All of this and stopping at our locker had a timelimit of 5 minutes.

Although we tried to be organized and civilized we didn't always act accordingly, at times we yelled and pushed each other in hops that the line would move faster.

"It's impossible to get from one class in the new building in 5 minutes." said Hope Heller, junior. Other people were alert and their curiosity arroused, one person was Anne Men Gal who said, "I am amazed that there are so many people in the halls and on the stairs at the same time." —by Leila Tajiri

Oh Puhlease - Felix Labunski and Brent Lindsten hold a breif debate about war and peace, before entering class.

I'm in front! - Katherine Lim smiles as she and Julie Stinnett, Elizabeth Isaeff and Nancy Bennett rushes to class.

You wanna go where? - Mellisa Tuttle, Jessica Boyles and Steven James holds a discussion of where to go to for lunch.

Is this my room? - Rowena Ng checks the door number while Lori Bustos follows her feet to her class.

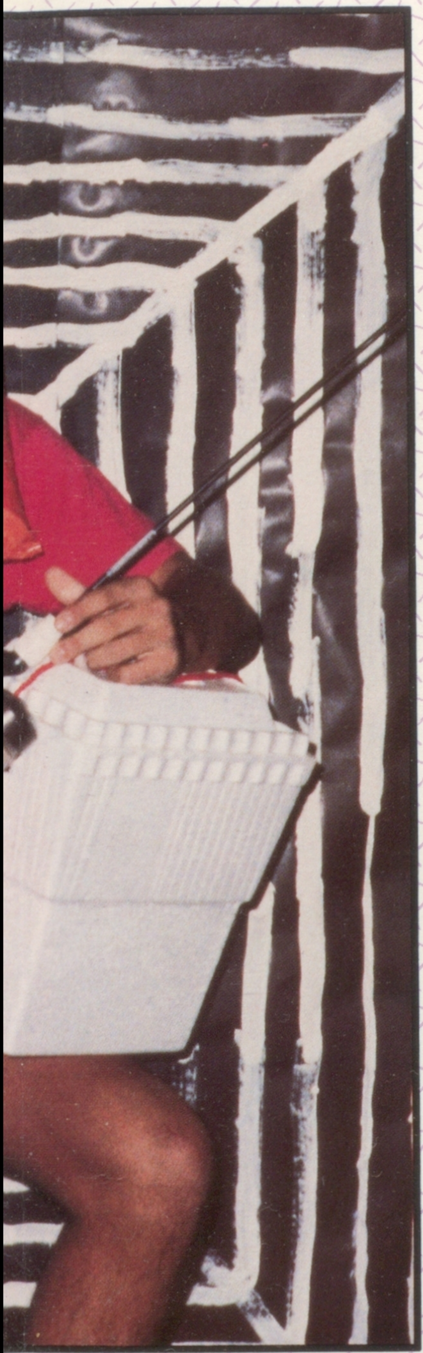
What a good day - Anne Men Gal leads with a smile as Mark Jeppson, Michael Becker, Debbie Kelly and Steve Sparks amble to class.

What are you lookin' at? - Scott Brown, seinor looks at our photographer eye to eye. Scott was very active during spirit week.

Out of this world - Stacey Gravis, M.J. Mariani, and Peter Graham pose in their class costumes.

Paling around - seniors Gloria Ariosa and Karen Jine sport their Tourist outfits at the circle.

Want some candy little girl? - This monster was one of the main attractions in the freshman hall.



Cruzin' through the Spirit

On my way towards my first period I walked down the hallway—not just any hallway but the senior hallway. I was in Bedrock. I cruzed by the Hardrock Cafe, Bedrock department store and eventually into Fred Flinstone's home. The hard work paid off for the junior class by recieving first place with their "Out of this World" skit.

The sophomore "Sail Ashore" theme and freshmen go "Trick or Treating" theme did not win the skit or hallway contests but they did show spirit by strutting around campus in the days designated fashion.

Monday was sweat day; Tuesday, blackout day; Wendesday, class theme day; Thursday, tourist day and to conclude the week the students wore gold and white with pride on Friday.

Senior Kelly Pleska said, "Everyone came together and showed total spirt. We did not show spirit as one but in unity. This year's spirit week was sweet, fresh, raw." —by Craig Moraes

Which way did we go? - seniors, Jennifer Bryant, Jennifer Stahl, and Liz Brown examin their maps during a lunch time class competition.

Spirit soars through AHS

The halls were packed with ghosts, mermaids, robots and the Flintstones. The occasion? Spirit Week! October 5-9 was an exciting week of spirit and fierce competition and a time for students to let loose and put their craziest ideas to work.

"It's a hard job to orgainize such a large class, and I feel they're doing a great job," said David Diaz, senior

The hard work and orgainizing shone through when the skits were presented.

The school spirit roared through the gym as the cheerleaders began the "Class Countdown"! Unfortunately, there didn't seem to be as much spirit as in past years.

Perhaps it was a case of senioritis setting in. Many students noticed that the lower classes were more spirited.

"The freshmen did a really good job this year. They were much more orgainized and together," said Oshi Jauco, senior. —by Christy Schreiber

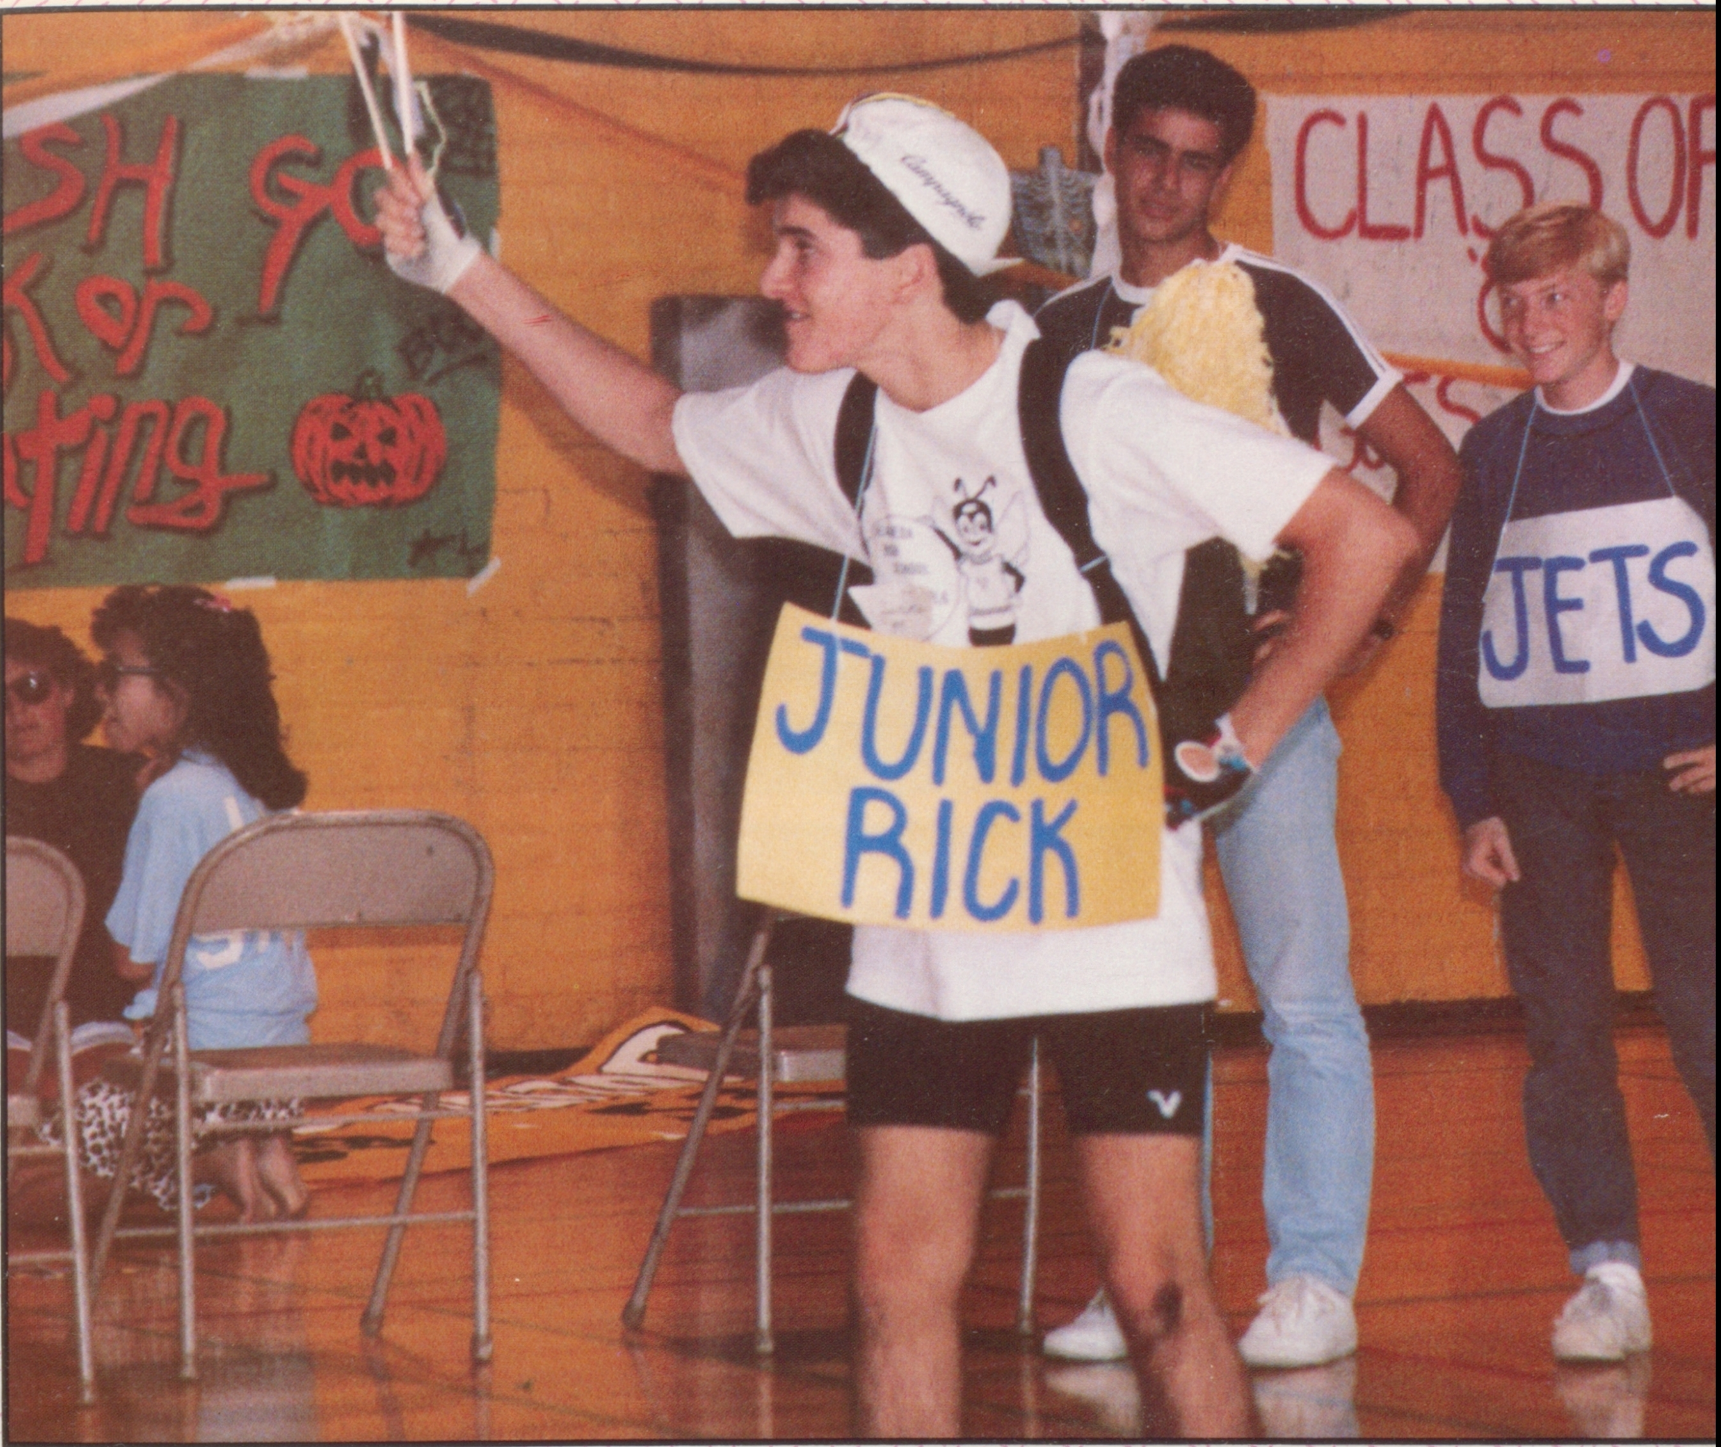
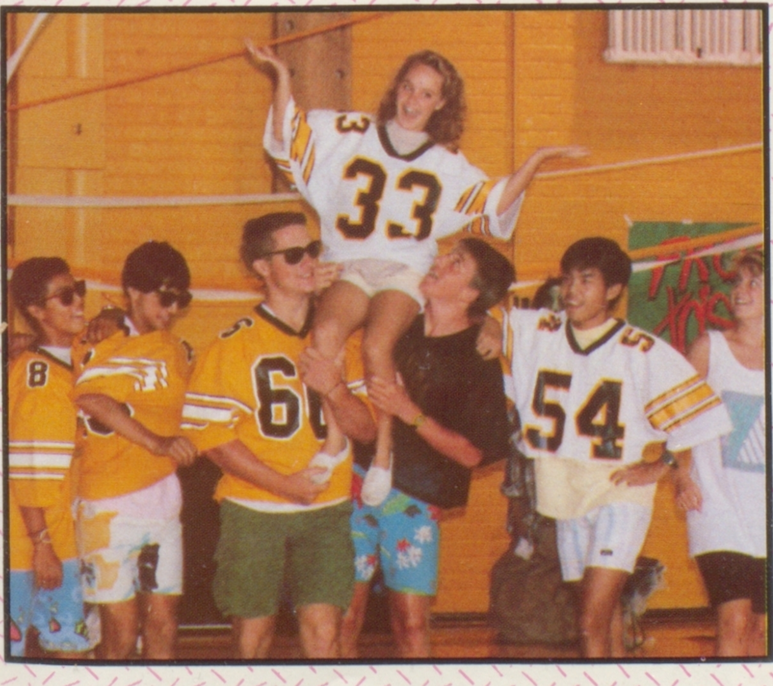
Oh Baby Baby! - Junior Craig Moraes dances his way to stardom in the Spirit Week skit. Craig was the hit of the Junior class skit.





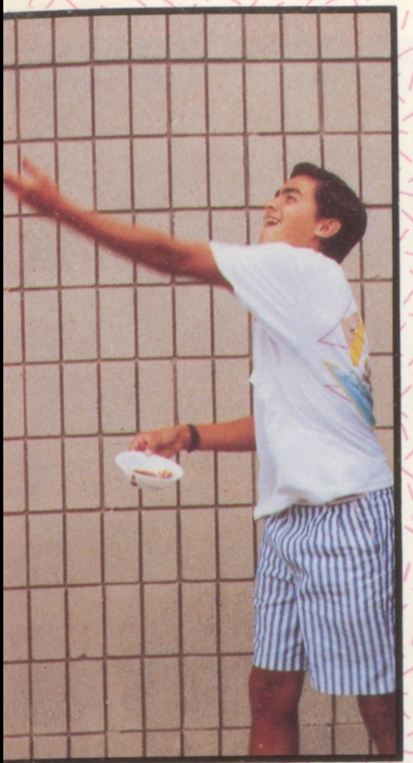
Go Team Go! - David Diaz, senior roots for the Alameda Hornets football team in the Senior class skit. Opposing Seniors Alfio Levy and Mark Gomez come up from behind.

Ohh Yeah! - Sophomores Joe Quinto, Mohammad Suleiman, Randy Pope, Alden Parkeer and Kevin Seto boost Suzy Oram above the crowd.

Catch it! - Christine Collins and Trae Marciline try to catch water balloons as Janelle Ogden and Dora Lee watch on.

Up! And away it goes! - Kellie Copper and Camilo Moraga, sophomores, try to eat chocolate marshmallows.

Getting Closer - Lisa Aoyama and Rob Swift, juniors, try to finish their licorice first.



That's Entertainment

The piercing vibrations from the bell filled the hallways as students raced to the circle to get a seat to watch the fun filled lunch hour rally. As students ate lunch to the booming of the music, the cheerleaders prepared to fill the student body with spirit.

"I went to the rallies for class spirt, class competition, and to prove that the class of 1989 was the best," said Danny Diaz, junior. Some went to show class spirit, but why did the others go? "My friends and I go to the rallies to listen to the music and to watch our cheerleaders dance," said Ingrid Luz, junior.

"The rallies were a good way for students of all grades to come toghether as one, and they are fun too," said Craig Moraes, junior. Most students liked the rallies, but a few felt somethings could be changed, "The rallies were great as they were, but they should include even more activity from all of the students that are just watching. Too many students just sit. That's not exciting enough to bring people back," said Kathy Wayne, junior. —by Susie Profumo

Open wide! - Eric Draper, senior, tries to pick his licorice back up to finish the class compotition first.

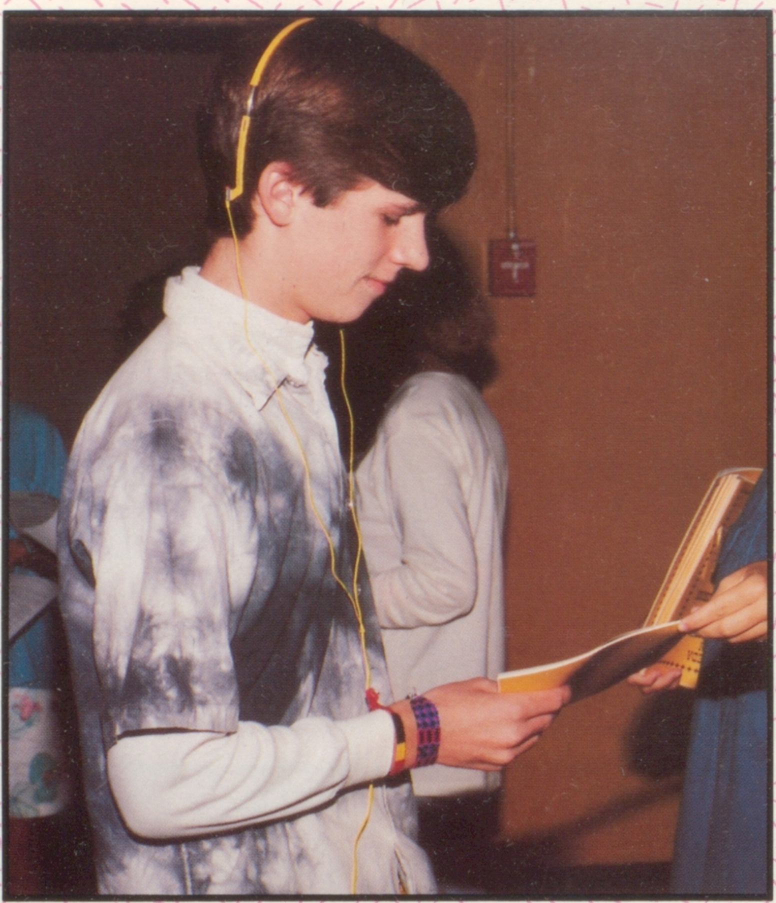
I'm late! - Mark Egan, freshman, dresses hurriedly to finish first in the class competition.

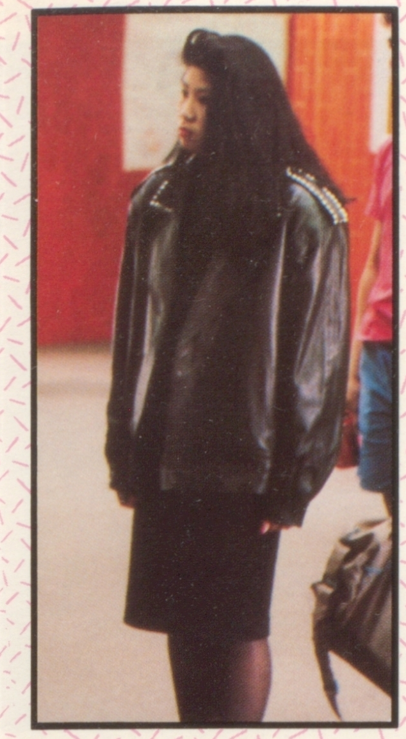
Dressed in black- Sandy Fong, sophomore, wears an all back outfit while waiting for the bank to open.

Blast from the past- Charlie Matson, freshman, listens to his walkman and wears a tie-dye shirt.

What a lunch!- Nicole Withrow and Tanya Cullen enjoy their lunch and model their outfits.

Hi There!- Jenny Wilson, sophomore, greets people while showing off her colorful shorts.





T Chic

As always fads and fashions were important to the AHS student. It seemed everyone had an individual style. Some days students dressed up wearing a conservative outfit and on others a colorful, flamboyant one. How they dressed often reflected their moods.

No matter how dressed, let's face it, there were some items that everyone thought were way cool. For example: turtlenecks, rugbies, Guess jean jackets, black Reeboks, Gennera sweatshirts and Swatch watches. Acid washed jeans were extremely spiffy and it seemed everyone owned a pair. Jean jackets were very popular, expecially if they were acid washed or had lots of saftey pins on them.

Colors were almost as important as the outfit. Wearing black was a very big fad. Wheather you were a rocker, nu-waver, or a mod you probably had totally back outfits. Colors were different, however, on warmer days. On these days people dragged out anything bright. Especially in: white, pink, and turquoise.

"I think it's cool the way everyone has their own style," said Susan Lew, sophomore. —by Tim Folsom

The Mod Look- Dan Bruno and Desdemona Bandini hang out in a hall.

Hot Weather garb- Tiffany Blanchard, Michele Gilchrist, Kristen Gardner, and Carla Mounsey, sophomores, catch some rays.

Homecoming Festivites

"I didn't know until that moment that it would be me," said Kim Lowell who was crwoned the 1987-1988 Homecominmg Queen. The lucky couples danced the night away to the tune of "Forever Young" at the festive dance that followed the big AHS-Kennedy game. AHS lost 29-6. "Well I was pretty upset but I hope they will get them next year," admited Sam Flores, Quarterback.

This year a special bit of flair was added to the traditional parade. Mr. Armen Phelps, the head of the music department, organized a marching band and a flag team. The flag girls along with a few members of the U.S. Marine Crops, its color gaurd, our marching band, the class floats, and the court convertables accompained the homecoming parade.

When asked what she thought about this year's events, Betty Ruark, vice principal said, "Homecoming has improved one hundred precent over last year, including the parade, the use of the color guard, and Marine Corps." —by Jennifer Williams

Band Attention! - The new AHS marching band under the direction of Mr. Armen Phelps marches proudly in the homecoming parade.

A Coming Home

Ever so slowly the awaited floats rolled closer and closer to Thompson Field, the place set for the 1987-1988 Homecoming Football battle between the Hornets and Kennedy. Behind the masterpieces created by clubs and classes trooped hoardes of rowdy AHS rooters.

Halftime grew nearer and the suspense mounted while the crowd and candidates waited to see the outcome of the Homecoming competitions.

"Homecoming is great, the people chosen do a lot of work and this is a way to show our appreciation. Spirit is essential for high school and this event is an excellent promoter of spirit," said Senior Alicia Hayden.

Kim Lowell and Greg Ross were chosen as the 1987-1988 Homecoming King and Queen. The Freshman class won the float competition.

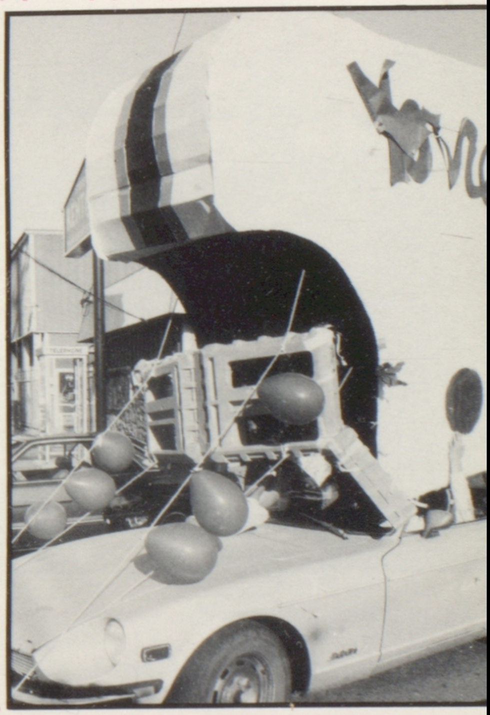
Hey there! - Hornet Cheerleaders Bee Jay Funk, Melissa Bray, Elizabeth Rawly, Dyan Dillon, Monisa Huston and Sylvia Balogh say hi.



Whoa There! - A nervous Junior sits inside and tries to support the classes float.

Hands Up! - Jennifer McDonald, Lori Hamblin, and Rob Hamblin live it up at the dance.

Natives are Restless

Somehow, I knew I had to go out. Grabbing my simulated leather bag, I rushed out of the door. As the heavy rumbling thuds beat relentlessly at my feet, the tribal sounds lured me to a towering auditorium.

The natives were restless.

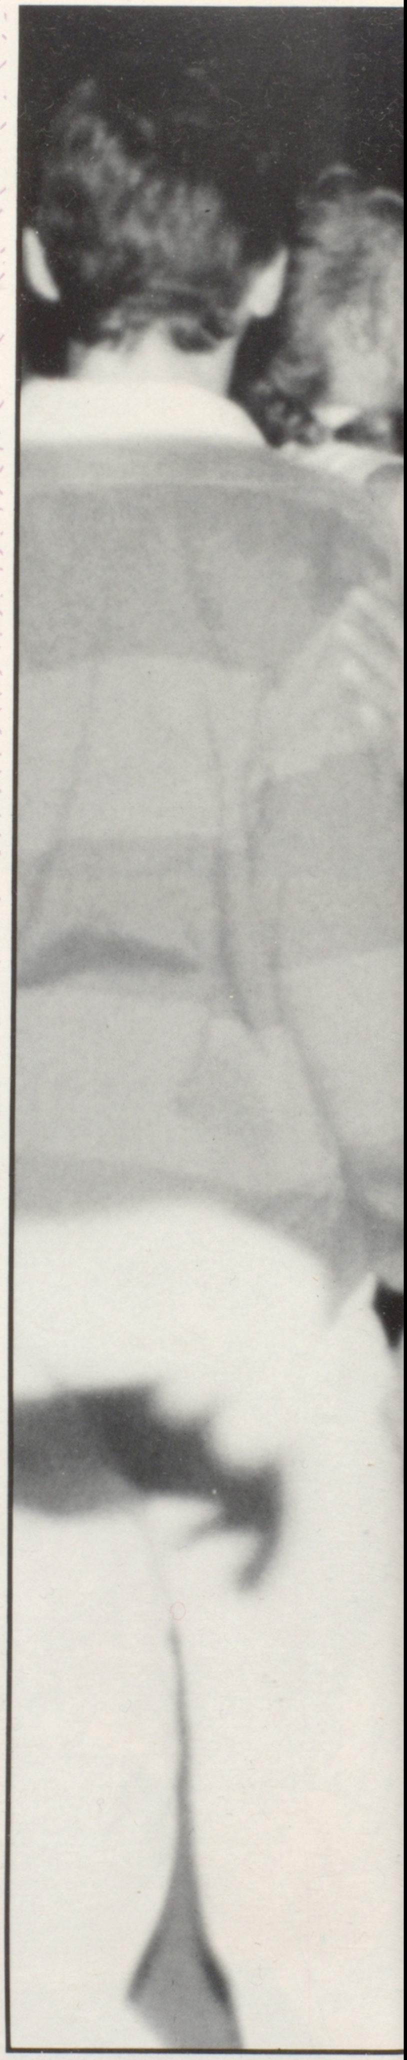
Inside hundreds of teens ceremoniously gyrated and flapped their arms. Along the perimeter of the dance floor sprouted lazy spectators and exhausted dancers. However, one couldn't help notice the teachers orbitting the room with hands clasped and smiles plastered on their faces.

Students revealed their tribal tendencies to the pulsating beat of the music. Cabbage-Patch-ing, Wopping, and Snake-ing were the fads of the evening. I soon realized that dancing wasn't a specator sport when I was dragged onto the floor for a slow dance. My partner and I danced in continuous revolutions until the last song was played.

Satisfied, I left. The dance was our way of forgetting school. We were free from our binding chains of term papers and math. Free, that is, until Monday. —by Precious Costales

You don't say? - Judith Thompson and Milt Werner discuss the latest dance steps while listening to "Twist and Shout".

Our corns are killing us! - Michaela Micocci, Eddie Gambetta, Lori Lujan, and Jerrod Archuleta rest from their exhaustive workout.



Oh, What a relief it is . . . - Senior Ray Sunia, and Juniors Rick Keiser, Rob Swift and Jay Yalung relax their tired toes after the dance.

Well, isn't that special? - Sophomore David Sherak looks surprised as he spots one of his teachers dancing away.

The Dancing Shoe - The crew flash their Colgate smiles after a night with Exposé and Depeche Mode.

Life Outside of School?

Weekends: the two day break from school with which students were blessed. And what did the majority of Alameda High students do on their weekends?

Fellow students could be seen wandering along Telegraph Avenue going to Rasputins or Blondies in Berkeley. Some students practically lived in Berkeley on the weekends. "Whatever I do, it's not in Alameda," said Sophomore Christina Chan.

Shopping was always something friends did together. Walnut Creek and San Francisco were favorite places to spend money. On Monday morning the words "sale" and "buy" were still in many minds.

When Erik Nolthenius was asked about his weekend life he said, "I wash the dishes and watch football." Dora Lee, sophmore, said, "I catch up on all my taped soap operas of the week."

Other students went out on dates to the movies or dancing in San Francisco. But for most of us bachelors and bachelorettes Saturday Night Live was the peak of our weekend life. —by Susan Lew Sugar! - Juniors Jay Yalung, Mike Kemmerer, Ray Kang, Ron Parodi, and Marion Borst pause for a popsicle.

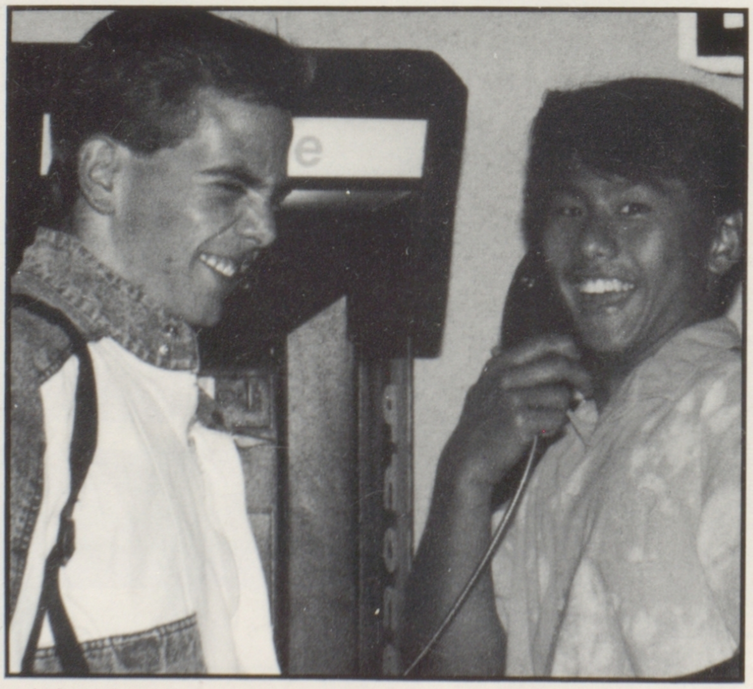
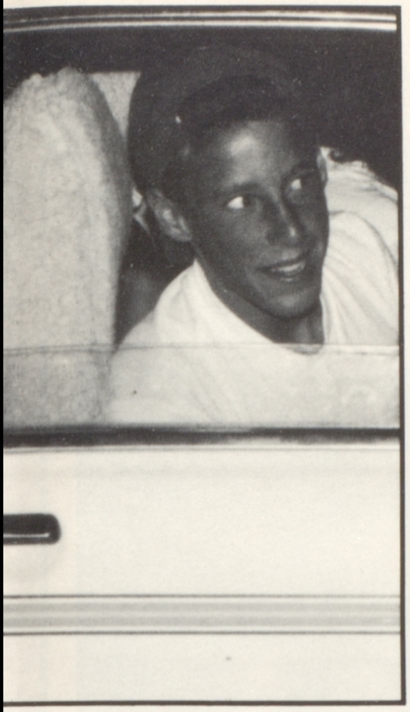
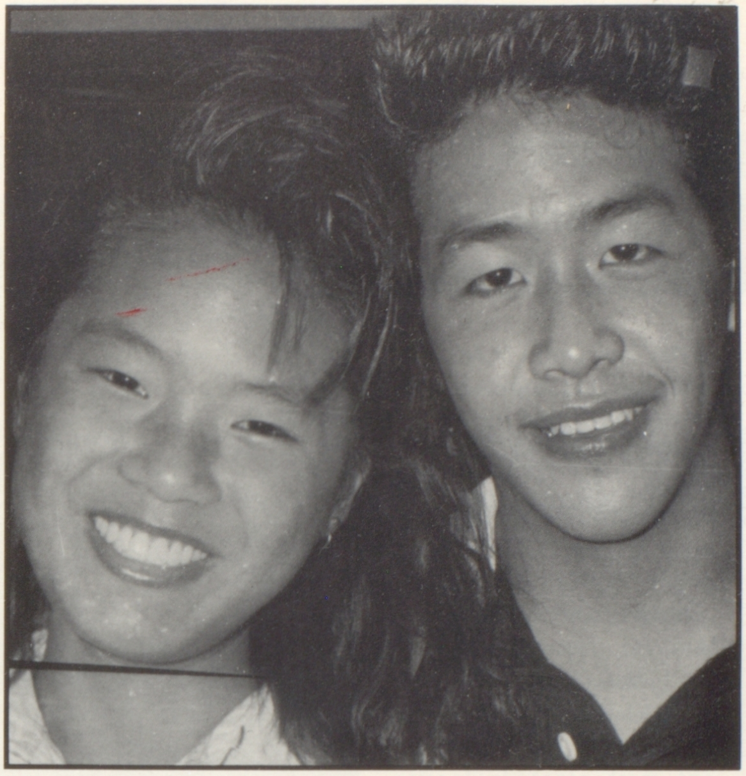
Can't you tell we're twins? - Juniors Karin Ingeman and Lisa Gallagher wonder why it's not obvious.

Hi mom, can you come pick me up? - Scott Brown and Henry Lin call dear ol' mom for a ride home.







Want a lift? - Seniors Brian Carbis and Kantad Svensgaard and Junior Eddie Gambetta cruise the island for fun

Agh! - Senior Greg Ross tries to fix Senior Wayel Fare's face.

Can we stop smiling now? - Sophomore Karen Fong and Senior Chris Chin wait anxiously for their picture to be taken before their faces crack.

A Change of Pace

She sat in room 138 and contemplated her environmental transition. In 1983, Chui Shan Kwong, junior, and her family left Hong Kong and landed in Tucson, Arizona.

With only a limited amount of English, she found it hard to keep up with the other students. They also made fun of her and copied her accent. In time, she found that the students began to accept her but they only accepted three-fourths of her. She could never be their equal.

After four years in Arizona, she moved to Longview, Texas and since this September, she has been living in Alameda.

"My favorite place," she commented, "is Hong Kong."

But she liked the American lifestyle. "Americans are wild," she said. "They always go after what they want.

Let's start - Chui Shan Kwong begins to write her life story.

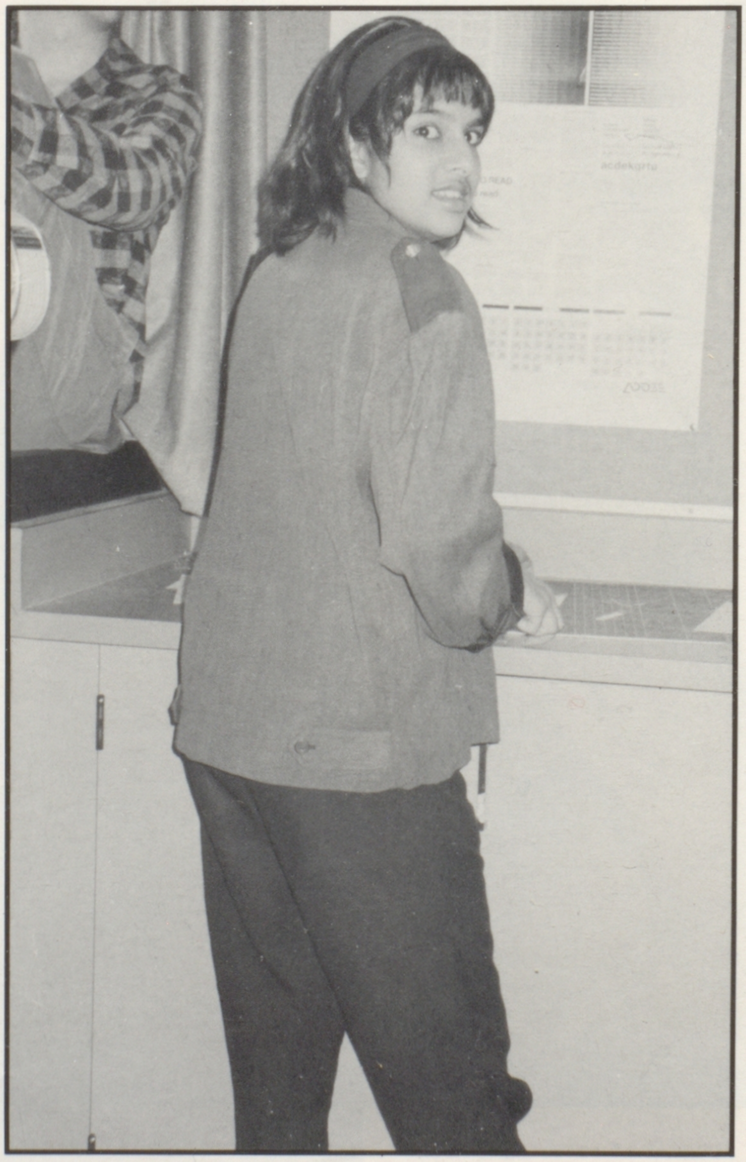
Better than the Birds Can

She walked constantly around the room and chuckled. Senior Sharon D'Cuhna has filled her life with music. At age three, she used to sing at her parents' parties. The song that inspired her was "You Light Up my Life".

Then she went through a stage when she was scared of people. "I would hide behind my mom's dress and wouldn't sing," she said.

D'Cuhna was also a member of the San Francisco Girls Chorus for many years. Afterwards, D'Cuhna spent the last two years of high school conducting the Girls Ensemble at AHS.

In the future, she hopes to teach English and conduct a choir.



I'm ready - Taking a break from her work, Sharon D'Cuhna smiles.

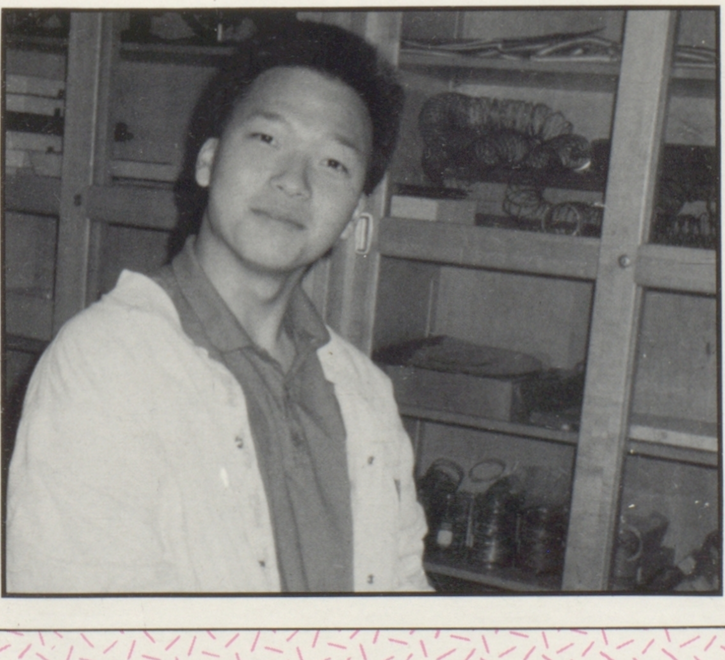
Tuning In

How is it like to lead a symphony? Only a sophomore, Kevin Gee was already concertmaster of the Bay Area Wind Symphony which is comprised of high school students from the Bay Area.

"You get to lead everybody," said Gee, who played the clarinet. The symphony was a rewarding experience and he was able to meet many people.

Although Gee will not pursue a music career, he will hope to follow music through college.

Looking ahead - Already a concertmaster, Kevin Gee looks forward to the future.



When Music Combines with Art

As an illustrator for the "Oak Leaf" newspaper, Junior Jin Kim seemed to have a liking for art; however, his real interest was in music. Kim liked all kinds of music and has played the piano for many years.

Kim also took on a heavy load of advanced placement courses. With three AP courses, he spent an average of two to three hours of homework per night.

He came from Korea and has lived in the US for ten years. Some colleagues describe Kim as a quiet person. He believed that sometimes people need to listen.

"I don't talk when I can aways listen," he commented.

All smiles - Music plays a great part in Jin Kim's life.

Leading Character

Leadership brings images of power and prestige to the imagination. What is not considered, however, is the turn of events that brings a person to a leadership positon. People, in order to rise to this plateau, give up a little of themselves in order to achieve and maintain the standards leadership demands.

Suzy Oram, sophomore class president, is a good example of the kind of person who excels in the ranks of leadership. The responsibility that looms over Suzy as well as the other people involved in leadership is tremendous.

"Everything that goes on in the sophmore class is my responsibility," said Suzy. Suzy, who has served on Ad Board in her freshman year, and also was the class representative at her middle school, seems to like having the responsibilities and duties that come with the turf. —by Damon Paiz

Leading the Way

The Leadership Class organized quite a few activities for the student body. They sponsored dances, intermurals, ice cream bowls, and the ever popular gum ball rally. They were responsible for all of the assemblies, and class competitions. These dedicated folks also made the posters for other clubs and classes hanging in the halls. This might sound easy, but it's tough work; activities had to appeal to everyone, not just one specific group.

"The most fulfilling part of being in Leadership is knowing that I help in making the school be more spirited or doing things for the people in our school. It also makes my high school years more exciting because I got involved," said Senior Oshi Jauco, who was the student Body vice President. —by Sarah Leslie

Stars Shine at Night

The nervous anticipation grew as 8 pm came near. The students in the audience were milling around in the theatre talking to their friends and teachers when finally the time came to present "The Matchmaker".

'The play was really fun to work on and it took up a lot of our time, but I'd definately do it again!" said Jenny Dow, one of the members of the stage crew.

"I thought the play was great! The actors and actresses really seemed like professionals," said Nicole Threlkheld, one of the many students who went to see "The Matchmaker".

The play, directed by Frederick Chacon, was approxametly two and a half hours with a fifteen minute intermission.

The cast members were: Steve Lofgren, Richard Bunker, Steven De La Torre, Alicia Hayden, Kantad Svendsgaard, Maura Wetherford, Sam Louis, Lisa Mosley, David Diaz, Catherine Cohen, Julie Long, Jeff Tyler, Mike Wallace, Scott Jones, Gretchen Anderson, and Cybelle Kelly.

—by Lynnette Dignon

Lights! Camera! Action!

This year's spring drama play, "Rimers of Eldritch", directed by Fred Chacon was a teriffic display of the talent of many promising actors and actresses.

When the question was asked," Do you prefer stage work, or would you rather do movies?", Richard Bunker, the assistant director of the play, answered," I'm not sure. The fame is in the movies, but I like the live audience on stage."

The cast included: Robert Boller, Melissa Willman, Alicia Hayden, Andrea Campell, Eva Hageman, Nancy Fernandez, Erin Mason, Eric Noble, David Diaz, Julie Long, Lisa Mosley, Cathy Cohen, Steve Lofgren, Mike Wallace, Kerriie Kettlehut, Jeff Tyler, and Kantad Svendsgaard. The understudies were Kim Gustin, David Berney, Cybelle Kelly, Steven De la Torre, Scott Jones, and Alex Bell.

Death of Simon Plays On

Amidst essays and math problems, three people found time to enjoy their interest in music. On March 17, 1987, Dennis Aman, David Baker, and Kier Batson formed the band, Death of Simon. With Baker as the primary composer, the band described their music as melancholy new wave.

"I get inspired from emotional things in life," said Baker. "The lyrics are about reality—melancholy. Some people might call it morbid but it's just that most people can't handle those things that actually happen such as dying."

Although the band was relatively new, it did enjoy bits and pieces of success such as performing at church parties and open houses.

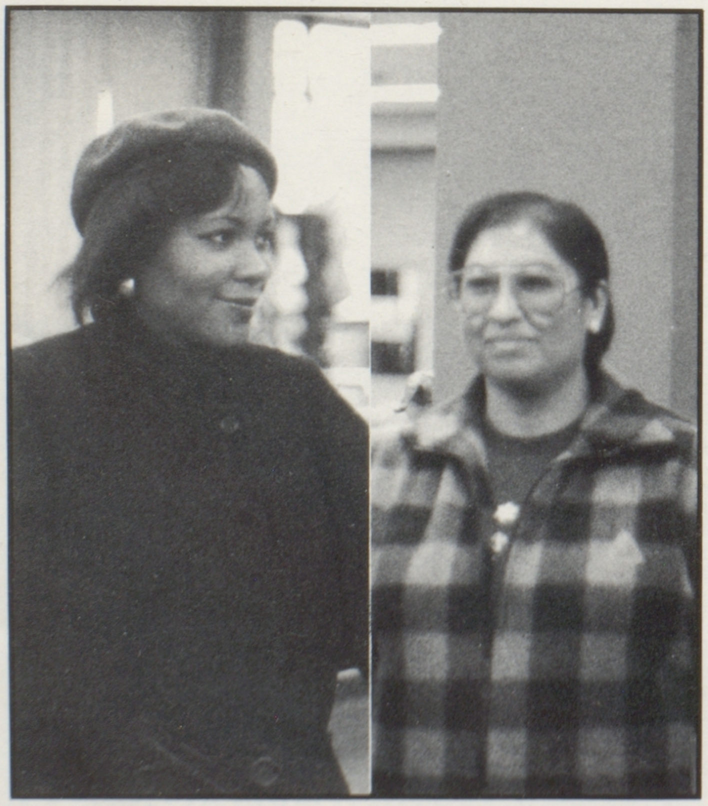
"We really got good reviews," said Batson.

"We don't really want to do any independent shows. We kinda' want to get in and out of the club scene," commented Aman.

In the future, Death of Simon hopes to make a demo tape, cut a record, and obtain a recording contract with a record company. —by Desmond Chin

Hit it! - Death of Simon consists of Dennis Aman, David Baker, and Kier Batson. The band hoped to play at the Twilight Zone in January.

They Do More than Supervise



Tell all - Maria Esparza chuckles at Daniele Gaines's experiences in the halls. The two also supervised after-school detentions.

In order to get a clear picture of the rigors and everday occurrences of a campus supervisor, it is vital to go right to the source, mainly the campus supervisors themselves. The two campus supervisors in question are Maria Esparza and Daniele Gaines. I talked with them to find out more on this subject.

Daniele said that the students generally have a positive attitude towards them. "We like communicating with the students and treating them like young adults."

Their basic duty is to ask students for passes, especially the ones who seem to be lingering. "On the average we catch five students a day without passes," said Gaines.

Both admit, though, that one of their unpleasant duties is to walk through halls laden with trash. Maria said, however, that the best thing about being a supervisor is getting a chance to talk with the students of AHS. "Part of the job is getting to know the students." —by Damon Paiz

Lottery Disappoints Schools

The California State Lottery was started in September 1985 to enrich lives and support state education. Only 34 percent of the lottery revenues were given to the schools. The rest was set aside for the prizes (50 percent) and administrative costs (16 percent).

The concern was the purpose for which the funds were being used. When the lottery initiative was passed, the school districts were to use the money for additional purposes over and above the school budget. It was not intended to be used for anything that would be a continuing cost, such as teacher salary increases.

In the last two years, this intention has been broken. According to Alameda School District Superintendent John Searles, the state education department found that most school districts were using the lottery funds for their operating budget. The Alameda school district used the lottery money to support media teachers and middle school counselors. In the Berkeley school district, the money was used for supplies and employee benefits.

Although most school districts felt that the lottery was a letdown because it did not provide what it was meant to, they also felt that it had become a necessity. —by Desmond Chin & Aimee Rodgers

Writing the Curriculum

A group of over twenty teachers representing seven different departments at AHS have been meeting regularly to work out a possible program for writing across the curriculum here at school. What is writing across the curriculum? It is a way to intergrate writing skills and interdisciplinary topics in a variety of different classes. For example, students in world history studying the Frech Revolution could also read Charles Dickens' novel, A Tale of Two Cities, in english class, study French culture during the revolution in French class, and even talk about experiments or mathematical problems in math classes. Students who have studied in such programs report that their learing makes more sense—and their test scores show improvement. The Alameda School Board has given permission for AHS teachers to spend four half-day sessions in the spring (without students) learning, discussing, and maybe even implementing some writing across the curriculum ideas. New ways of getting students to write in different kinds of styles—journals, letters, editorials, how-to recipes, etc. —will mean that we all practice our writing skills regularly, and not just our English classes. —by Cheryl White

200 Years and Counting

Nineteen eighty-seven marked the 200th birthday of the United States Constitution. While the bicentennial event may have merited more than its share of parades, a greater emphasis was placed on the understanding of the historic document.

Receiving coverage in nearly every form of media, the Constitution enjoyed an increased visibility. ''That delicate balance'' of the legislative, executive, and judiciary branches of government was long labored over by the Framers of the Constitution. They set out to create not government led purely by the people, but one of representation. They envisioned this system as the balance between mobocracy and monarchy.

Compared with numerous other constitutions of democratic countries, the US Constitution is the only one that still remains basically true to the original in form and content. The secret of the Constitution's success is its flexibility. the ambiguity in so much of the durable document is what has allowed it to survive for so long.

Debate still continued in issues close to students. Questions of freedom of expression were raised ranging from censorship of the student press in Hazelwood, Missouri to the banning of ''Spuds MacKenzie'' and ''Corona'' T-shirts in San Lorenzo, California. —by Darryl Lee

Bork: the Controversy

In all the years of American history, the nomination of Robert Bork caused more controversy than any other nomination for Supreme Court justice. One of the major questions concerning Bork was would he overturn previous court decisions such as Roe vs. Wade, the landmark abortion case? Bork felt that this was not up to the Supreme Court, but that it was up to the states. And nowhere in the Constitution did it say that women had the right to abortion. In another court case, Griswald vs. Connecticut, which struck down a state law forbidding the use of contraceptives, even with married couples, Bork declared these rulings unconstitutional.

Bork was a major anti-federalist. He, like Reagan, wanted to give the states have more rights. He was a strict constructionist; no elastic clause for him.

Many liberals were against Bork's confirmation. For years, Bork had been opposed to Black rights, saying so in documents. In 1963, he was actively against a proposed civil rights bill that would allow Blacks to eat in public restaurants. But in his hearings, he suddenly changed his views, which liberals believed to be a way of buying a ticket to the Supreme Court.

Bork did not get confirmed. Reagan then picked Arthur Ginsberg to become the next justice. Unfortunately, he admitted to smoking marijuana as a lawyer and was battered by questions. He withdrew. Reagan then picked Anthony Kennedy from California who was later confirmed by the U.S. Senate. —by Jennifer Feitelberg

Black Monday - the Crash

October 19, 1987 became the day unparalleled in the history of the United States Stock Market. The day, instantly dubbed as "Black Monday", saw a collapse of an unimaginable magnitude of the Bull Market that even surpassed the "Crash of 1929" which ushered in the Great Depression. Between the Stock Exchange's opening at nine o'clock in the morning and the closing bell at four o'clock in the afternoon, the Dow Industrial average plunged 508 points, or 22.6 percent, or in dollars and cents, an incredible 500 billion dollars on paper.

Why did the crash occur? Some stock analysts attributed the plummet to the Reagan illusion - the idea that a nation could live indefinitely beyond its means, spending more than it owns.

What were the results? Would Black Monday cause a recession, a global depression, or usher in high interest rates and inflation like the Great Depression that began in 1929? To quote Treasurer Secretary James Baker, the prevailing philosophy seemed to be, "Wait and see." —by Trudy Shiu

Humm-baby!

On October 28, 1987, the San Francisco Giants clinched the National League Western Division by beating the San Diego Padres, 5-4. Unfortunately, they lost in the playoffs. "It was like falling in love with a beautiful woman. I went to the heights of ecstasy and the depths of agony," said Giants fan Dave Fairfield.

Humm-baby! What exactly did Manager Roger Craig mean when he first said those two words? Well, Humm-baby could have been Will "the Thrill" Clark and Robby Thompson making the Giants' 120th double play. It also could have meant, as Craig put it, "A good looking girl. Why was Mrs. Craig called Mrs. Humm-baby? Because she is a Humm-baby."

In the best of seven games during the playoffs, the Giants lost four games to the St. Louis Cardinals. They didn't advance to the World Series, but they'll by trying hard in 1988. Humm-baby! —by Susan Lew

"Is it not true . . .?" charged Keith Koo, defense attorney. Indeed, it was true. In October, 21 students formed the AHS Mock Trial team with Advisor Cheryl White.

The mock trial competition gave the students a chance to step into the shoes of an attorney or witness and argue a case or testify in a real courtroom. The team consisted of prosecuting and defense attorneys, pre-trial attorneys, witnesses, a clerk, and a baliff.

The case entitled "People vs. Friendly" involved an issue of property, police, and privacy and featured a constitutional argument about the Fourth and Fourteenth Admendments of the U.S. Constitution. Week after week, the students practiced their roles and were aided by a licensed attorneys.

At the end of February, the team then argued the case against other mock trial teams from other schools. The competition took place in a real live-situtation courtroom. The team was scored based on their presentation and organization. —by Desmond Chin

If you looked closely at the student body, you might have noticed that a few of the students were slightly different from the rest. To be precise, there are six. These fortunate few were the foreign exchange students.

Christophe Bertrand was a student from France. He wanted to be a foreign exchange student so he could see different cultures and learn a new language.

"I would like to see all of the U.S." said Bertrand, "but I would like to come back to AHS so I can visit my friends that I have made here."

Bertrand was very involved in the activities of AHS. He was an aid to the French teachers, and he worked as a staffer on the Acorn.

They were the Music Department's Girls' Ensemble and they were under the direction of Sharon D'Cuhna, senior. D'Cuhna studied the piano for a number of years and was with the San Francisco Girls' Chorus for seven years. Sharon started the ensemble in February 1987, and one year later, it was one of the best groups in the music department.

The Girls' Ensemble was broken into three section: altos, first sopranos, and second sopranos. The sections were headed by Jeanette Journeay, Sue Kim, and Laura Woudstra.

The girls performed at the Fall Choral Concert and the Christmas and Spring Concerts. Outside of school, they performed at convalescent hospitals, the Bank of America in San Francisco, and at the Harbor Bay Isle Health Club.

Board Reinstates Boundaries

Open enrollment was put to an end on May 26, 1986 when the Board of Education voted to reinstate high school attendance boundaries. Imbalance in the student population at Alameda High and Encinal High was the single reason for the decision. At the time of the school board's vote, Alameda's enrollment was over 400 students greater that of Encinal's.

The difference in population eventually overcrowded AHS and depleted Encinal of students needed to fill their classes. Due to the greater mass of students, AHS added new courses to their curriculum to accomodate student interest. However, Encinal, listing 25 fewer courses than Alameda, had a "greater amount of space—a luxury Alameda didn't have," said EHS Principal Barry Conner.

Reactions to the reinstatement of the Union/Grand street boundary were positive and negative.

"Open enrollment was bad for both schools," stated AHS Principal Gretchen Wheelwright.

On the other side of the coin, closed enrollment as it balances the unequal school populations, did not send students to the high school of their choice.—by Jin Kim Separate ways - Union Street now determines whether a student attends Alameda High or Encinal High School.

Deserving more than apples - A teacher makes his feelings by picketing in front of the district office.

Teachers Say No to 2.5%

In September, the Alameda Unified School District and the Alameda Education Association (AEA), to which 400 teachers belong, began salary negotiations. The school district offered a 2.5 percent salary increase ($400,000) over last year, but the teachers were not happy with that offer. They wanted a 4.5 percent increase ($800,000) and declared an impasse in the negotiations.

On Janurary 12, over 250 teachers wore red clothing in protest of the board's offer at a school board meeting. After the January board meeting, teachers from various schools in the district picketed outside district's main office, carrying signs that showed a slash through "2.5%".

On January 26, more than 200 teachers picketed the steps of the main office building and participated in a mock funeral. After the funeral, they formed a picket parade.

If no progress was made in the negotiations, the teachers considered to: 1) give informational leaflets to the community; 2) cut down on volunteer supervision and support of school activities; 3) and as the last resort, vote to authorize for a strike. However, the dispute was settled on Feb. 24 at a 4 percent increase. —by Desmond Chin

No Place to Call Home

Gaunt and pale, the homeless and hungry families huddle for warmth and beg for food. The government ignores them, the police arrest them, and they are condemned as public nuisances.

Unfortunately, I am not describing life in Ethiopia or Nicaragua. Struggling to survive, the poor and homeless in the United States are faced with a cold world. For example, it is a crime in Alameda to be homeless. No one may sleep in the parks, benches, or streets. Likewise, if the homeless are fortunate enough to own a car, they may not sleep in it.

Last summer, 88 illegally homeless Alameda families arrived at the Red Cross' doorsteps. Another shelter in Alameda provides warmth for women and children for a maximum of two weeks. After that time, they are on their own. They must beg or hide to survive; if they are caught, the police arrests them and dumps them in Oakland.

The American people must stimulate the government into action. Funded job training and relief programs, if organized and supported, can provide effective help.

Perhaps, one day, there will be a time of comfort and joy for everyone—the poor included. —by Sharon D'Cuhna

Fighting a Complex Killer

In a span of seven years, over 29,000 Americans have been confirmed as carrying the Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). Experts estimate another one and a half million Americans are infected with the virus but are not aware of it.

Although it is widely believed that AIDS is spread chiefly by the homosexual community, recent facts contradict this belief. In actuality, the disease is most often transferred by I.V. drug-users.

Currently there is no known cure for AIDS, although some treatment is available. AZT, a highly volatile drug, is supposed to help curb the product of the antibody in the chromosomes of the human body. Despite the high hopes it brings, the drug is very expensive—nearly $10,000 a dose. Scientists also revealed less than 25% of those tested actually curbed the growth of the AIDS antibody.

AIDS cannot be spread through casual contact. The disease can be prevented in many ways: abstinence from sex, use of condoms, and knowledge of the partner's sexual and drug history.

By 1992, experts predict that there will be 270,000 cases of AIDS in the U.S. and 179,000 deaths from the disease. —by Danlun Lim

College sweatshirts filled the halls as seniors prepared to take the California Assessment Program test(CAP).

The CAP test affects everyone. The results of the test are compared with those of other schools and then published for all to see.

"This information is available to anyone. Often parents will look at this list before deciding on an area to live, depending on the school system," said Ms. Hoshi.

Some Seniors felt that the CAP test was not important because it did not affect their individual grades.

"The test should have been harder," said Senior Adrienne Thompson.

College night was the night for parents and students to gather information on colleges and to learn about entrance requirments.

As in past years, there were half hour presentations on the UC and USC systems. Representatives from the Peralta Comunity College system also spoke about their campuses. Students and parents had a chance to talk to representatives from private colleges in California, such as the University of SF, Feather River College and Mills College.

Many people who went to college night for the first time found it very educational-yet there were people who shared Terry Flock's view. "I was upset that Yale and Cornell didn't show up. Welcome to Fresh News

The students of Alameda High had the chance to see five new smiling faces in their classrooms.

Katheryn Davy, who wanted to be an actress, finally decided to teach special eduction. "I want my disabled students to be in the same schools with nondisabled students," she said.

Vicky Greenbaum previously taught music, journalism, speech and debate, but she taught English at Alameda. When asked about the teachers at AHS, she replied, "The teachers here have their acts together."

"I enjoy working with students who are interested in their future," said Pauld Bentz, the new science teacher. He had been teaching for seven years, however, this was the first year he taught in public school.

Mandy McManus, a counselor in middle school, decided four years ago to become a teacher. At AHS, she taught math and study skills. In her younger days, she planned to be a doctor.

Fun and lovable

"I'm honored to have been chosen by the students and I feel teaching is a profession which for many teachers appreciation doesn't come very often," said Terry Olsen.

Ms. Olsen taught Spanish. She said she had always been interested in foreign languages. She felt that knowing other languages "opens up cultural openings,and it's very valuable." She speaks French, Spanish, and Portiguese.

"She takes time with students. She doesn't rush you," said Michelle Metzner when asked why she likes Ms. Olsen.

Head of the pack

Thirty-two years ago a young man decided to teach at AHS after completing a major in English, and a Master's in Eduction from the University of Idaho. This man was Bruce Tingwall.

"AHS students have in general, been the most cooperative and polite students I have worked with," he said.

When asked about what he would change in the American school system, he said, "I believe we should start a program to emphasize classwork over everything else. Separate academic classwork from technical and trade, because the people I feel most sorry for were those who don't like academics but have to suffer through it."

Although he wasn't a native of Alameda, he still considered this his home. "I want to thank the community of Alameda for 32 wonderful years in a wonderful place." —by Ali Manbeian

Only three more!

"Every class is fifteen minutes longer, but there are only six of them, and with a one hour lunch, the day seems to go by really fast," said Heather Roach.

Some of the major differences between middle schools and high schools were things like longer off campus lunches, fewer classes, and more things to get involved in academically. Some choices were clubs, plays, sports, the school newspaper and the yearbook.

"I like the off campus lunches. You can go any where and there is more of a variety of foods," said Teall Harkey.

The Special Day class was made up of fifteen very special kids. During the day the students went to different businesses in the community and worked. "I work at Mervyn's and I enjoy it," said Kieran Cooper.

With teacher Kathryn Davy and her teaching assistants Beth Abuston, Arlene Goodwin, Lois Sonnerman, the students got all the help and attention they needed. "All the work is geared to each student's level," said Ms. Davy.

The students who were involved in the special day class came from all different cities in the Bay Area. Students spent seven hours a day at school going over how to use money, speech therapy, and fun activities.

Bob Hagan has been here with Special Education since 1982. Also he has been in the Alameda District all of his school years. This year was a special one for Bob and his family; this year Bob graduated. CONGRATULATIONS

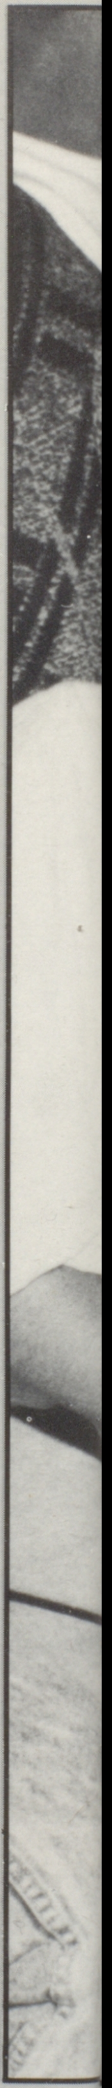
AMAZING FROSH

The Class of 1991 began their Freshman year with enthusiasm. Rather than being reluctant about their first year of high school, they were eager to start. "I'm looking forward to high school," said Luke Scott.

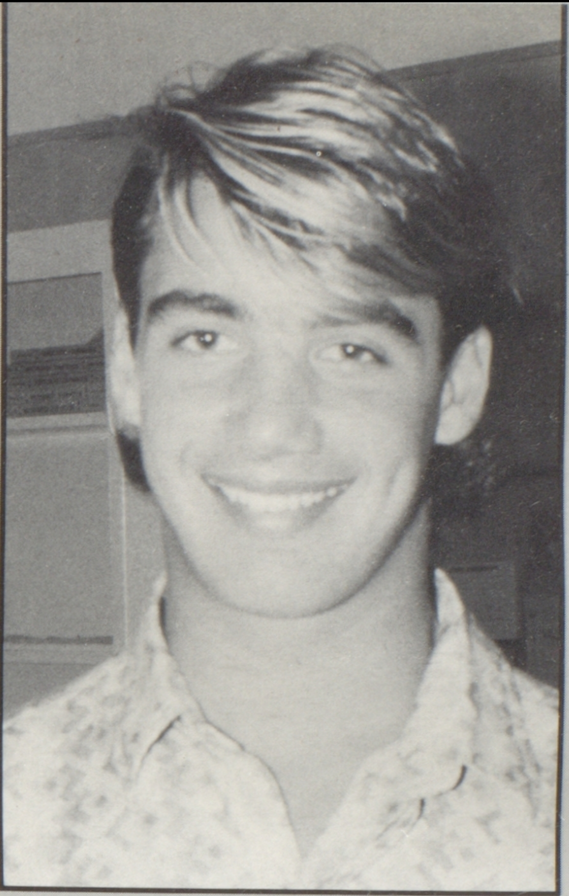
The Freshmen supported each other when it really counted, although the smaller events weren't as well supported. "I wish we could have pulled together more often," said Patricia Lin. —by Julia Berger

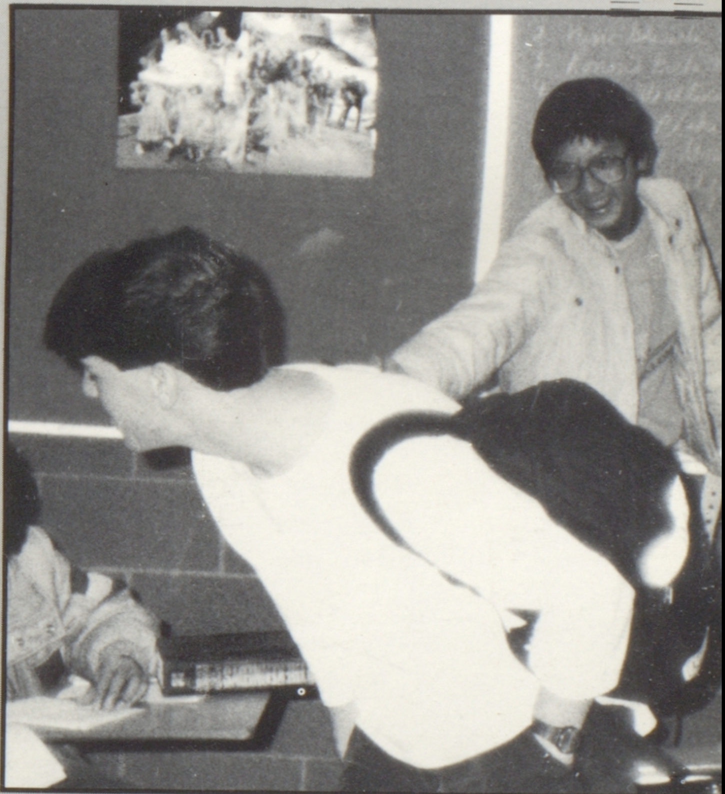
Fall Officers-Melissa Ng, president; Patricia Lin, vice president; Trae Marceline, spirit leader; Lori Amaya, ad-board, Maryann Kim, secretary; Linda Kim, treasurer; D'Karla Davis, adboard; Jenny Young, historian; and Jill Wootten, adboard.

Spring Officers - Linda Kim, historian; Melissa Ng, president; Jill Wootten, adboard; Trae Marceline, spirit leader; Patricia Lin, vice-president; Lilybell David, ad-board; Lio Saephan, treasurer; and Elizabeth Wong, secretary.



Quick! We're falling! - Freshmen Jason Hill, Jennifer Jones, and Chris Muskelwitz and Sophomore Wendy Leano hope that the difficult sport of standing will be a new Olympic event.





Our Featured Freshman: TRAVIS SWADER - Travis is a person who knows what he likes: football, the color red, Italian food, and all music, as long as it's not classical. Who is his idol? A football player? A great Italian cook? It's his mother, "because she had the courage to raise me." Asked what makes AHS different, he said, "There really aren't any fads. People don't do something just because someone else does it."

What did you get for number three? - Freshman Scott Dodds compares answers after a test as Freshman Kenneth Shum tries to tell them they're both wrong.

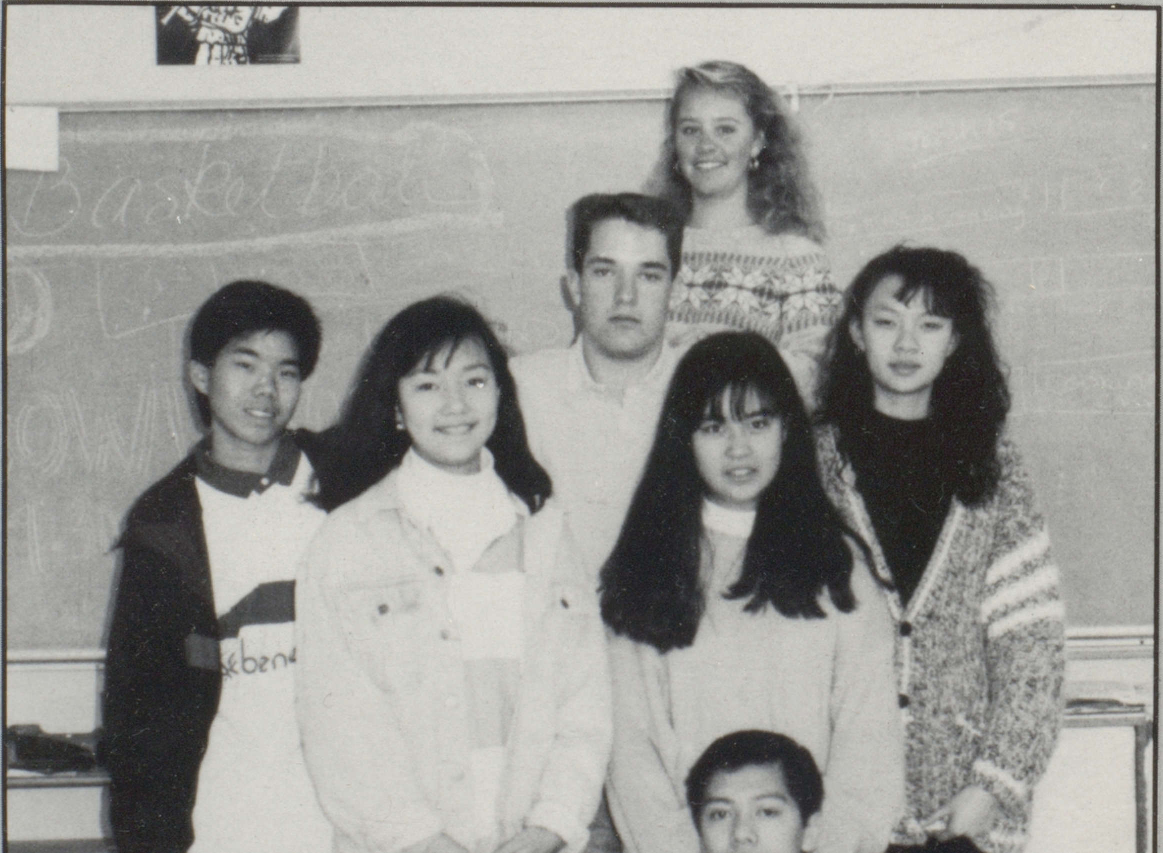
SUPER SOPHS

The class of 1990 began their sophomore year with a welcomed change in status and a change in schedule.

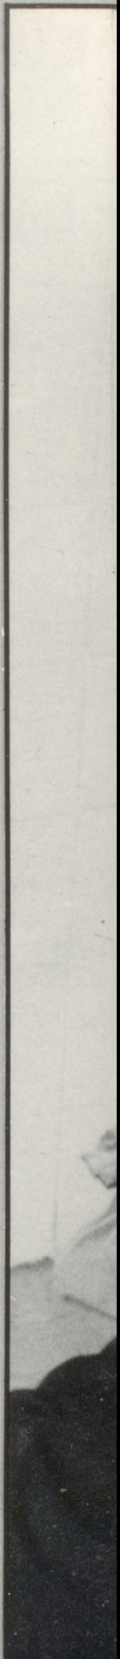
Practical Education was required, as some other classes were not. "We don't have to take history!" said DeWayne Crone.

The Sophomores didn't always come in first at school activities, but their enthusiasm won them first place every time. —by Julia Berger

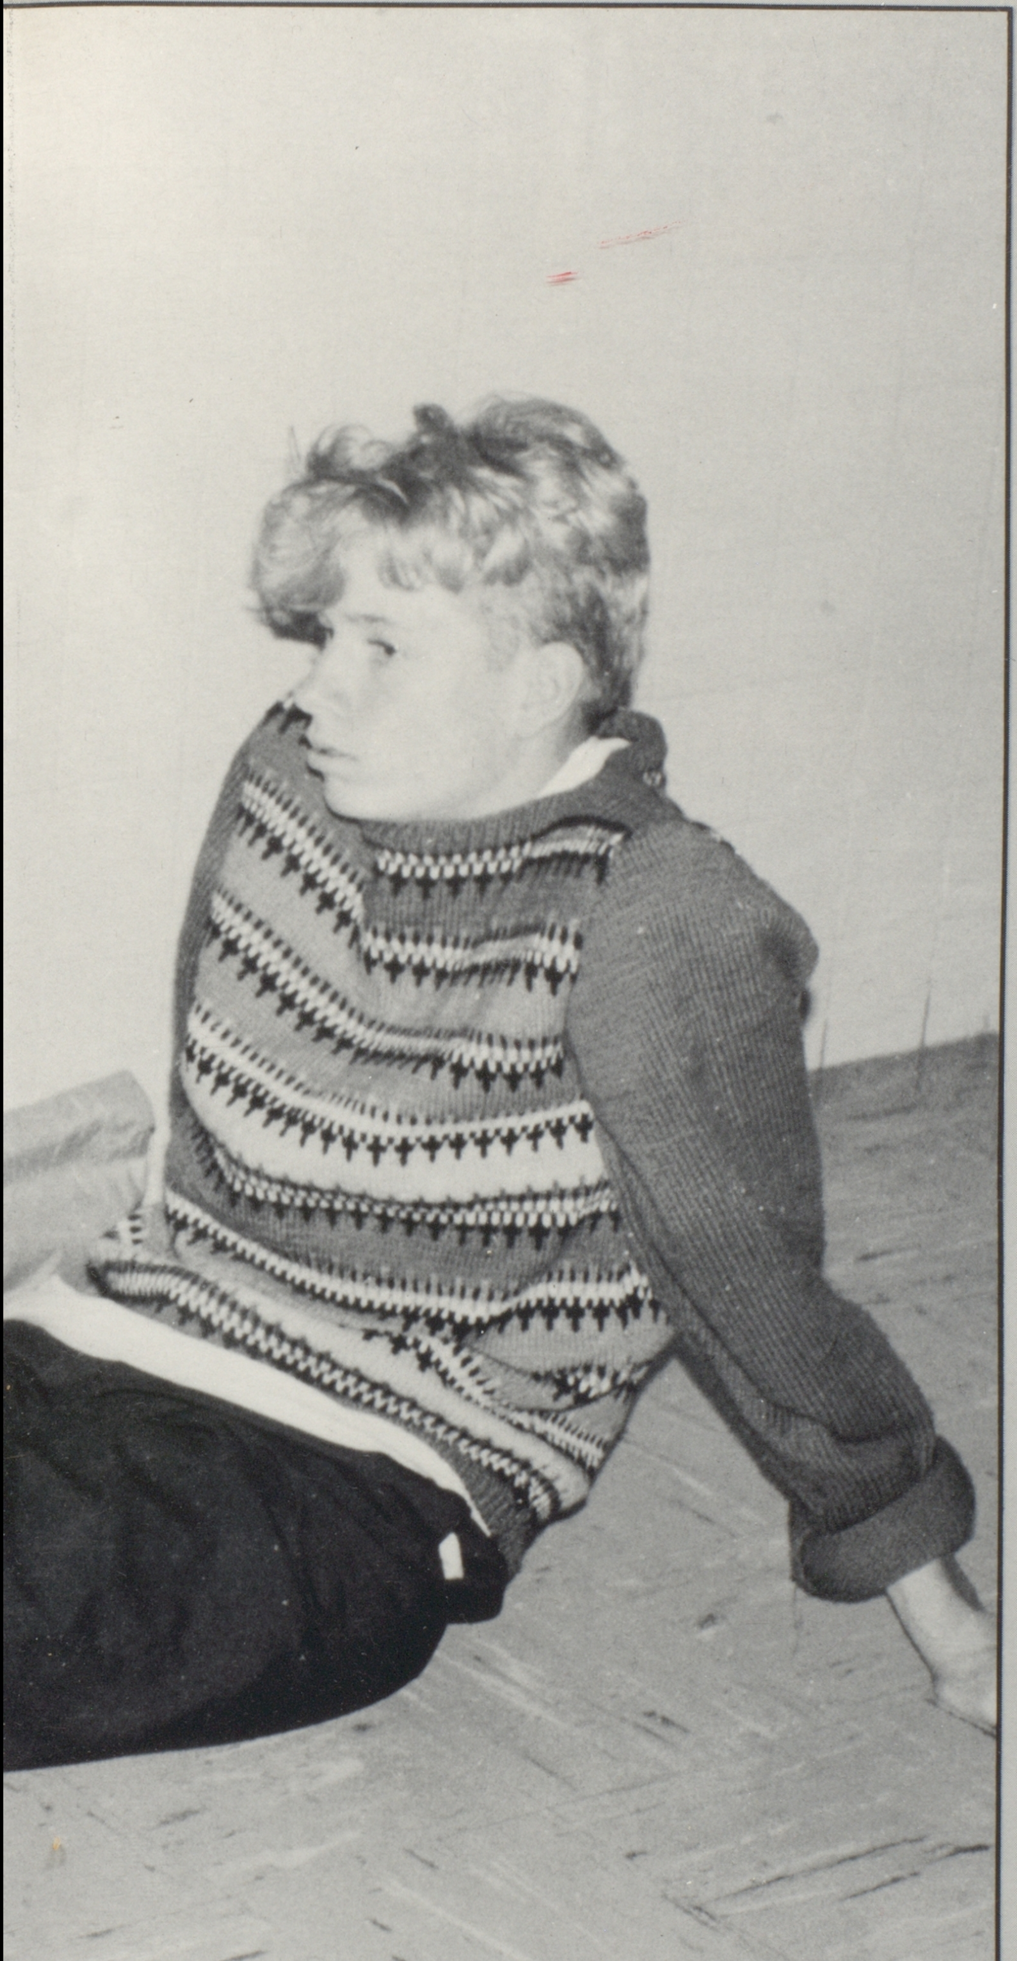
Fall Officers - First row: Dora Lee, ad-board; Joe Quinto, treasurer; Suzy Oram, president; Carol Seto, secretary; Precious Costales, historian; Christine Collins, spirit leader. Second row: Su Kim, ad-board; Kevin Seto, ad-board; Meredith Russell, vice president.

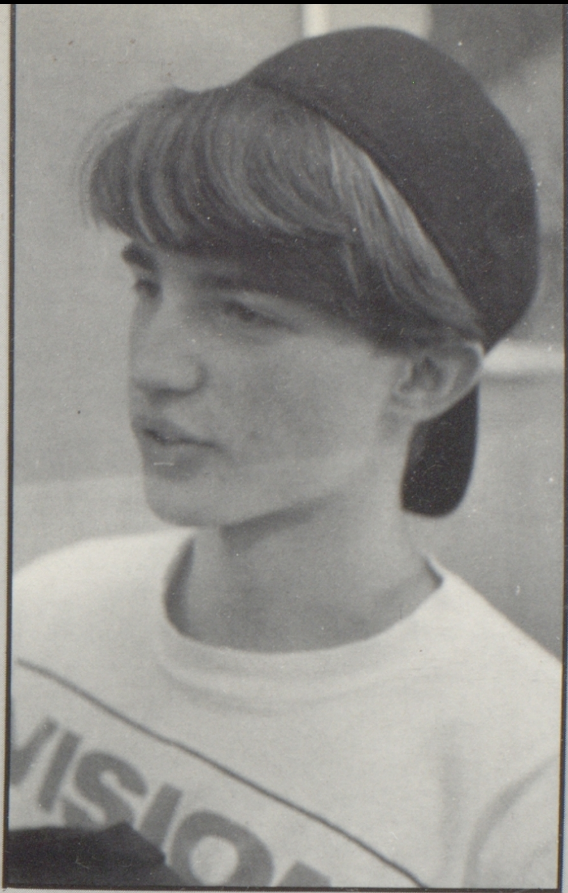


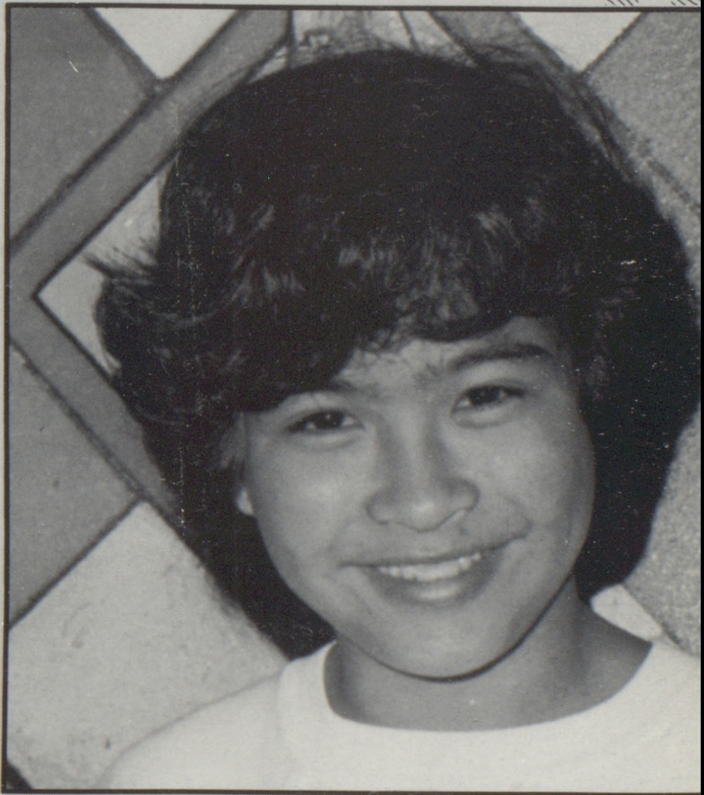
Spring Officers - Kneeling: Joe Quinto, treasurer. Second row: Kevin Seto, historian; Natalie Zee, ad-board; Su Kim, ad-board; Dora Lee, secretary. Third row: Randy Pope, vice president; Suzy Oram, president.



Let's see . . . - Chris Connolly, typical sophomore, contemplates what to do with the rest of his lunch period.







OUR FEATURED SOPHOMORE: ALEX CALIC! Alex likes school. "That's where you constantly get to see your friends." But he feels that more classes should be offered. "How about underwater basket weaving?" Alex's outside interests include skating, basketball, and making people laugh. He would like to pursue a career in, what else? International business. With his intelligence and energy, he's sure to do just that.

OUR FEATURED SOPHOMORE: BERNADETTE TESORO! Bernie is one of those people who is a friend of everyone. She believes in being fair. She has no idols and feels that assemblies, " . . . should be about the whole student body." Bernie has her hopes high in becoming a fighter pilot, and it looks as if she's on her way to becoming whatever she wants.

HEAVENLY HOP

Hopping the night away were AHS students at the December 4th Soph-Hop.

"Everyone had a blast, the D.J., Good Vibrations, was great," said Sophomore Chris David.

After a traditional night on the town, students made their way towards the nicely decorated gymnasium.

Varied colored balloons and streamers were strung around the gym to resemble "Heaven, A Place On Earth", the Soph Hop theme.

—by Craig Moraes

This looks great! - Junior Steve Ghio, and Sophomore Valancy Askins, are sure glad they didn't miss this dance.

Hurry Up! - Junior Dennis Aman and date arrive at the gym with no time to waste.

OUT OF THIS WORLD

The Junior class had to be the most spirited class at AHS. Early in the year they surpassed the seniors in class competition points to become the most spirited class. They were truly out of this world at the spirit assembly where they won with an imaginative futuristic skit.—

OUR FEATURED JUNIOR: DENNIS AMAN! - When asked what he thought was special about AHS, Dennis replied,"People are really varied, nobody tries to be like anybody else." Dennis used to be in the now defunct band Death of Simon but his intrest in music continues. Another one of his side interests is Astrology. Guessing what someone's sign is is another one of his hobbies. "If I find out what someone's sign is, I can usually tell a lot about them."

PROMISE ME

It was April 15, the night of the Junior Prom. Couples danced to "Promise Me" by the Cover Girls. The Gold Rush, a part of the blue and golf fleet, cruised the bay. It definitly was a night to remember.

A lot of work went into this prom. Many committees were formed to organize this year's prom. Said Jaqui Galvez, "I'm psyched."

...DIFFERENT!

Most polls contain such mind-searching topics as your favorite color, class, form of fungal life, ect. We here of the underclassmen section of AHS have taken it upon ourselves to be, shall we say, different (as in accordance with the theme of the book). Sure, our questions may be a little, shall we say, bizarre, but they're better than your garden variety "What do you think of AHS?"

So keep an open mind and don't think our chosen subject matter is "stupid". Be different! Thank you all you brave souls who answered our questions. Thanks for daring to be different in the name of expression —by Julia Berger and Tim Folsom

Dare To Pass The Limit

Moonlighting

As I walked in the dining room there was a sense of excitement. I could tell the Senior Banquet would be a sucess. Everyone had a great time, because that same day was the last day of semester finals.

After dinner the senior class officers gave out the awards for Senior Best. Then a slide show ensued which was presented by Noel Rivero. After that, the main event started: the dancing! The D.J.'s were the Music Masters and they played everything from rock to soul.

"I had a great time even though dinner went by rather quickly but the slide show and dancing was fun." said Senior Anna Phillips.

It was a good thing the seniors had the next day off because they would have been too tuckered out to go to school. The seniors can be proud of themselves because the outcome of the Senior Banquet was such a sucess.

The Senior Banquet took place January.28,1988. It started at 7 p.m. and ended at 12 a.m.—by Sarah Leslie

Dare To Want It All

Promising Future

"PURE PRESSURE!!" The Freshmen Football stressed to excel as a team, said Jason Hill.

The team's 3-7 record was not what the players were thinking about, but all the memories they will treasure for years to come. The one thing that made this team special was the fact that they didn't just play to win, but they had a lot of fun playing.

The team was disiplined. They wanted to learn how to improve their football skills. Coach Roger Bauer helped them learn the game. In the beginning of each practice session Coach Bauer would have a talk with the team about their last performance and told them in which areas they needed to improve. The team in general played a lot better, than they had in past years.

"The team has excellent potential." Said Vice Principal Milt Werner. He felt that if the team stuck with the program and practiced hard we would have an excellent varsity team in three years. —Ali Manbeian

Where are you? - Quarterback Young Yoon scans the field for an open wide receiver. Young Yoon also played the fullback position.

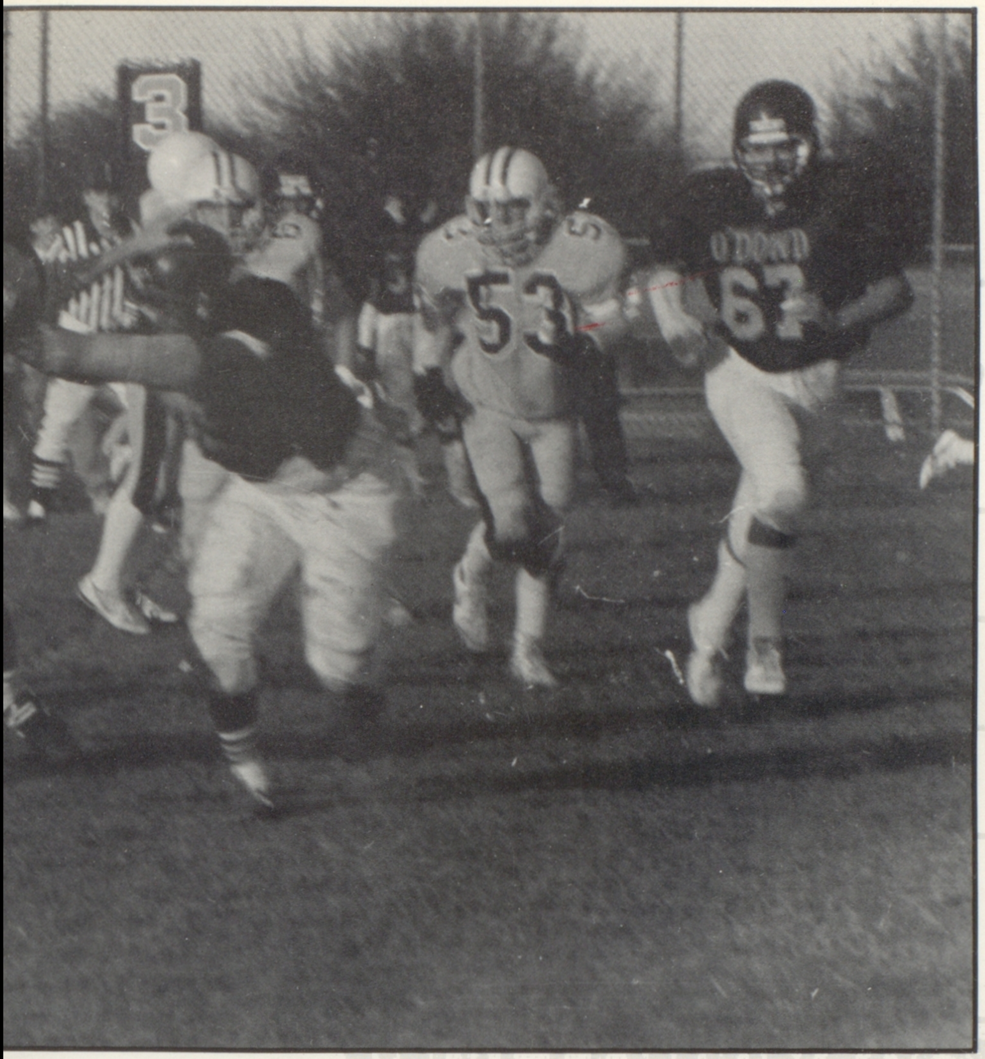
Ready for action! - Wide Receiver Gabriel Benabou waits to enter the game.



Get out of my way! - Travis Swater pushes his opponent away, as he scores points for the hornets.

Hoping for victory - Tim Green hopes for good luck during the hornets game with the Jets.

Closing in on Excellence

"We never quit!" was the J.V. Football team's motto. Joseph Quinto felt that secret of their success was the fact that they worked well together and never quit.

When asked why he joined the football team Dave Sherak said, "I like hitting people, and playing football is the only time I can be aggresive and hit people."

The team's strong point was their powerfull defence. It wasn't easy for their opponents to pass the goal line. "I like being aggresive." said Linebacker Jerrod Archleta. The team played aggresively and tough all year long.

"We are not as good as we thought, we could be a lot better," said Dave Sherak. However the team progressed as the year went on.

The hours of fun were the one thing that Quinto said he will always remember about the season. —Ali Manbeian

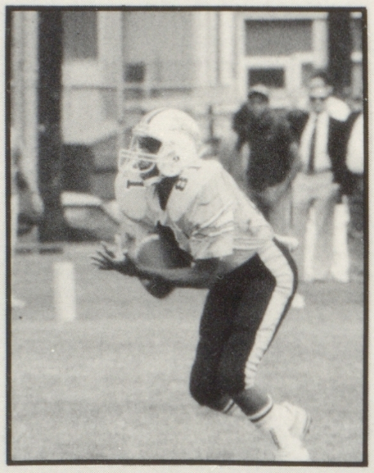
Blue 18! Blue 18! Set! Go!

Approaching the Piedmont field I could hear the roar of the crowd over the passing cars. Student I.D. in hand, I was anxious to enter The Hornet Zone! I looked up at the scoreboard and what did I see? Hornets on the verge of victory!

"The only game we played like a team was Piedmont," said Quarterback Sam Flores. And play like a team they did; the victory over Piedmont was stunning with a score of 21-0.

"We're trying our best but we're playing a lot of tough teams," said Captain Ryan Jensen.

All the Hornet games were not victorious this season but the team didn't let this get them down. "We've gotta keep our heads high and not lose our pride. When the going gets tough, we've gotta get toughter," said Runningback Jessie Hawkins. —by C. Schreiber and S. Cates



"I learned to be a team member instead of playing for myself. Playing Varsity as a junior was a challenge that will help me prepare for next year," said James Simon.

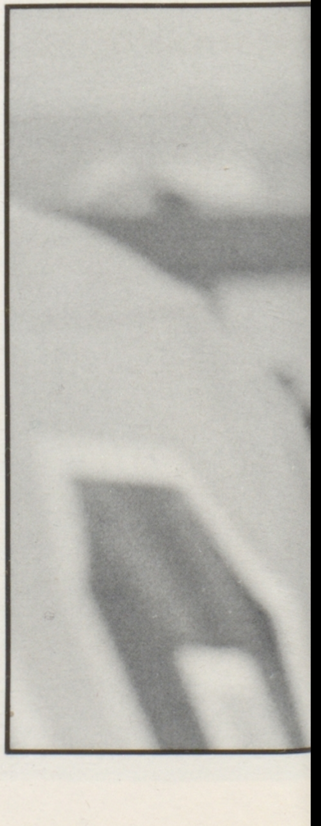
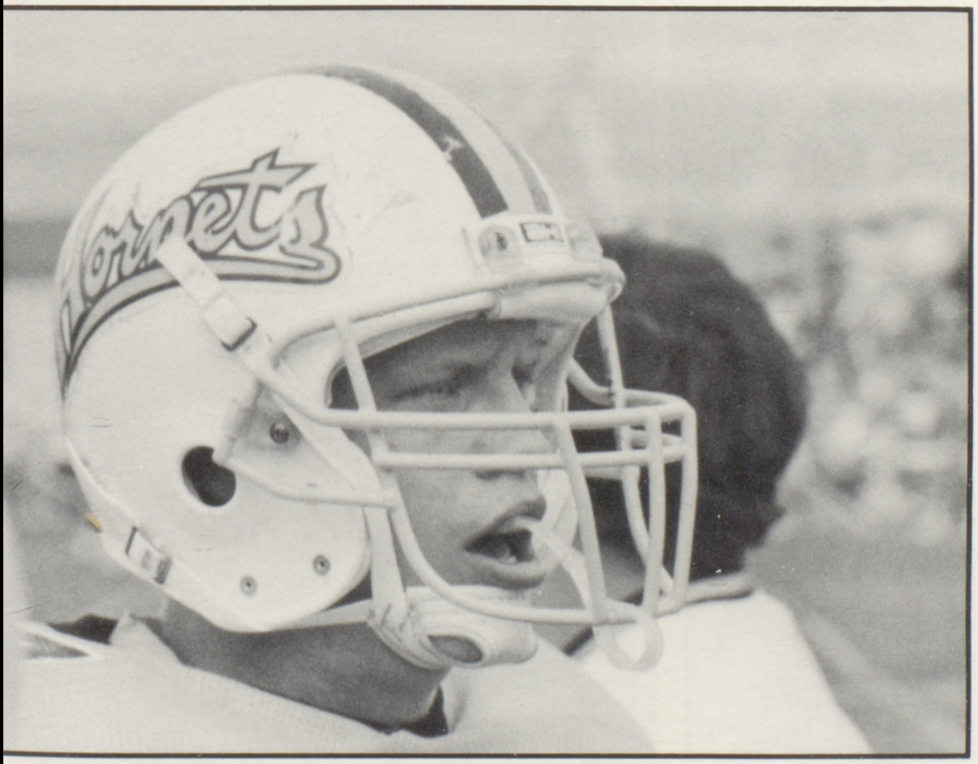
Up, Up and Away! - Roberto DeLatorre, senior, soars through the air to gain extra ground. Roberto is one of the few returning varsity players.





Get off my back! - Quarterback Sam Flores valiantly runs from an Encinal opponent.

Gosh, I'm tired! - Captain Ryan Jensen takes a breather at half-time.

Set, Spike, Score!

The volleyball fell sharply against the gym floor. Denise Mao scrambled to retrieve the ball. Resuming her position behind the serving line, she thwacked the ball over the net. It rebounded off of Linda Sae Jang's arms and plummetted onto the opposite side.

"Wait a second," said Coach Edward Fong, "What went wrong here . . ."

Volleyball may appear like a giant-sized version of ping-pong, but it's a lot tougher than one may think. Endless days of practices like these helped fine tune the athletes. Frustration and discipline dominated their time and attributed to their effort.

"We've got jammed fingers, torn ligaments, and bruised knees," said Bernie Tesoro, "But it's a fun sport."

However, the JV team's perfected skills paid off when they were put to the test against Berkeley. "I was all thumbs at first, at least now I can get the ball to where I want it," said May Ng. —by Precious Costales

Working under pressure - Linda Sae Jang psyches herself up as the ball is served.

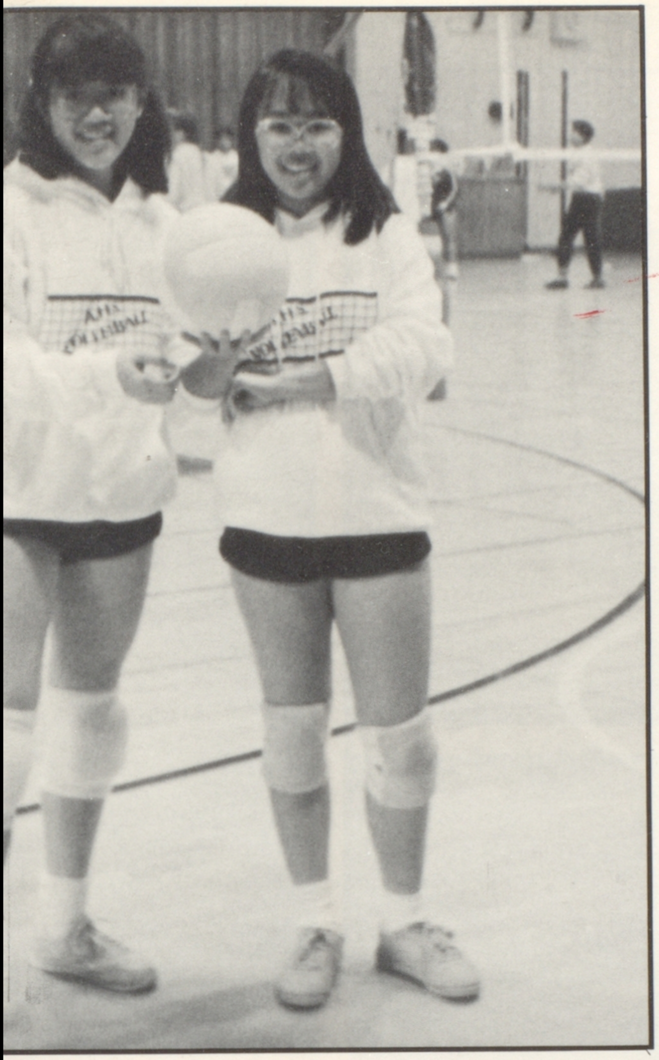
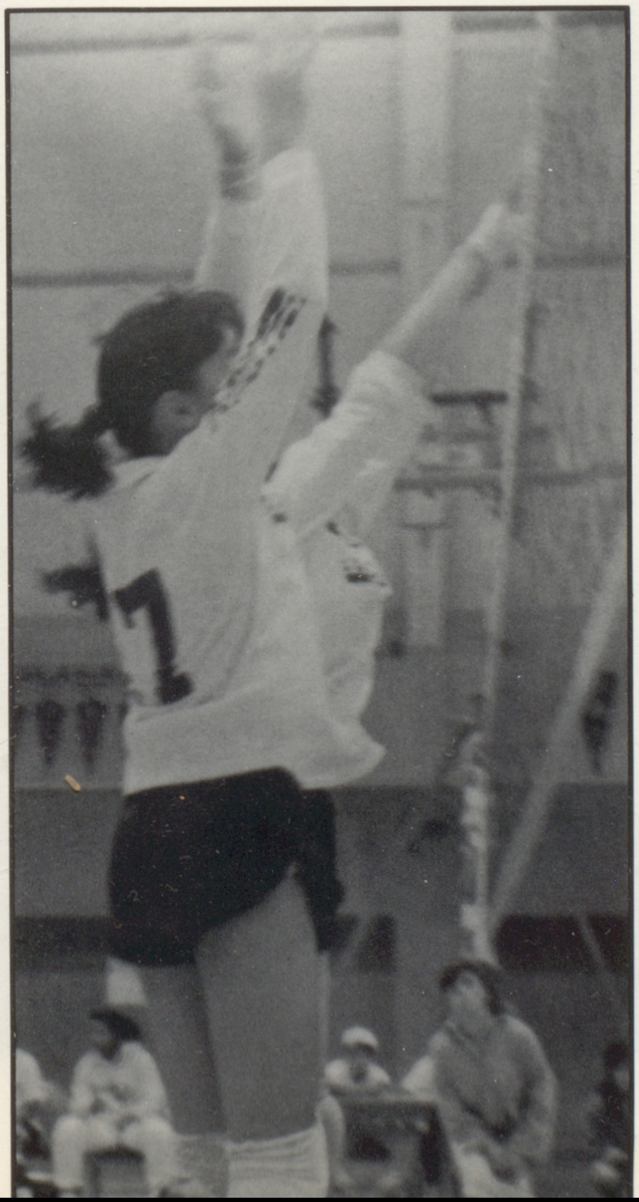
Here it comes! - DeAnna Pace and Bernadette Tesoro await the ball, prepared to defend the team.



Time out - Linda Sae Jang and Mae Ng take time to relax before a game.

Congratulations! - Linda Sae Jang, Denise Mao, Thu Ta, and Mae Ng show good sportsmanship after a victorious game against Encinal.



Hands up! - Thu Ta attacks the oncoming ball for another point.

Pushing it to the limit - Thu Ta (foreground) looks on as Denise Mao relays the ball to the opposing team.

Volley to Victory

Scooter? Thumper? Cocoa? Were these the names of Snap, Crackle, and Pop's Cousins? NO! As Shakespeare once said, "What's in a name? A rose by any other name would smell as sweet." 'Tis true for the Varsity Volleyball Team. With the help of Coach Roy Ching, members such as Vesna Sepic (Scooter), Laura Woudstra (Thumper), and Penny Bruce (Cocoa), managed to mangle the opposition in games against teams like El Cerrito and Pinole.

An especially prominent member of the team was Trisha Leckler. Trisha, although the only frosh on the Varsity roster, played very well for her first season.

But, despite the team's excellent playing in all their games, there were a few close calls. Berkeley, for instance, was a team to be reckoned with. However, the strictest discipline and smoothest moves made the AHS team come out on top. —by Precious Costales

Splashing to Victory

Through the raging waters, powerful bodies fought for the possession of the ball. This was not a life and death situation but the fast moving game of water polo. Water polo has been a winning tradition a AHS and this season was no exception. The team ended the season with 18 wins and only 7 losses.

''We won so many games because we had a fast and powerful team,'' said varsity player Alden Parker.

''I think we had great leadership campared to the last two years. We were also well organized and have an experienced team,'' said varsity player Buddy Linder.

According to many of the varsity players, water polo was one of toughest sports at AHS. It requires skill and strength as well as much endurance. All around, water polo was a game that all may watch, but only few can play. —by Andy Brooks

Positive Strokes!

"Hopefully all the time, effort, and boredom will pay off at NCS. Robert Rodd is a great fellow," said Senior Matt Rogers.

This year's men's varsity swim team was looking forward to a positive season. To make it to the top of their potential, workouts began in early February.

"There's an optional morning workout in addition to the afternoons. We probably swim 10,000 yards a day. It's tough but we do it anyway," said Paul McIntyre, junior. Success was the word that the swim team fought for.

"There's a good chance of winning North Coast Sections. This is the best quality team we've had in the history of Alameda. If everything goes right, we could be in the top three. Campolindo is probably our biggest threat. For me, Josh Kline and I will probably make it to eighth or so for the 100 meter breast stroke at the NCS. Friendship is a quality in this team; enemies are looked down upon," said Jeff Simpson, junior

Splashing Their Way to Victory

Bodies cut through the quiet still water as the women's swim team started the 1988 season. They dove their way into another year of the Golden Bay Athletic League (GBAL) competing for the top spot.

"I thought this year's team was one of our strongest ever. The addition of many outstanding freshmen swimmers gave us a good chance of winning our league this season," said Erica Phillipsen, sophomore.

Freshmen such as Jill Wootten and Brenda Weigel, who joined the AHS team, were also on the swimming team, the Alagators, as were many of the other members on the team.

The team was held together by Coach Mary Curry and its two team captains, Kristen Lyman and Katherine Grimes.

Parting of the seas - Senior Julia Lew glides through the parted water.

Young Racketeers

The women's tennis team came back as strong as ever trying to remain number one in the Golden Bay Athletic League (GBAL). They were spurred on by coach Dave Fairfield who said "This season was very enjoyable yet very difficult. I had twelve very talented, competitive, and opinionated athletes, and for us to have won a GBAL chanpionship was a credit to their competitiveness, a lot of luck, and a suggestion here or there by me. I was fortunate enough to have Dana Murray and Karin Ingeman as team captains."

Well, what did some students on the team think? "I love tennis!" said Sophomore Juliana Dongon. Junior Lisa Aoyama said, "I had a lot of fun. We had a great season and everyones supported each other through all the matches."

This year Rolli Holtje, a senior, who came from Germany joined the team. She was the number four singles player.

Screech!- A JV Hornet slides into third.

Going, going, it's gone! - Mike Ross hits the ball into orbit at Krusi Park.

Safe at Home

Craack! Home run! The crowd went wild. The Hornets scored again. These sounds echoed through the ball park all through the Hornet's home feild. The junior varsity baseball team this season showed much promise for the future.

"The team's not as good as last year," said Sean Steffan, "but I think we'll do all right." Steffan said he wanted to continue playing baseball throughout high school. "Because I just like it," he said and smiled.

The hot picks this season were Matt Barker, Ernie Marlon, and Sean Steffan according to baseball coach, Steve Yamasaki.

The team this year had many good qualities including pitching experience and team speed. "Even though the team had inexperience in key defensive positions, I'm happy with the team's progress," said Coach Yamasaki.

So it seems the 1987-88 Junior Varsity Baseball Team batted their way home. —by Andy Brooks

If looks could kill . . . Senior Mickey Mullen is ready for anything coming his way. Mullen plays third base.

Stepping up To Homeplate

The nature of baseball goes much further than just three strikes and you're out. The inner workings of the game involve a considerable amount of time, work, and determination. Behind each game, there exists hours of practice on the key elements of the game. To get a better viewpoint of the national pastime, I interviewed Matt Lafollette, a veteran of the game.

Lafollette's love for the game developed when he signed up for Little League at the age of nine. Ever since then, he has been addicted to the competitiveness and the atmosphere which baseball provides. "I enjoy all the aspects of baseball," said Lafollette.

Baseball has also taken Lafollette to the other side of the world, namely Japan. He went to Japan with eight other players from Alameda and eleven from Fresno to play in three tournaments. "The whole trip was a great experience," he said. — by Damon Paiz

Go ahead, make my day! - Sophomore Erik Nolthenius goes into his lethal wind up. This is Nolthenius's first year on varsity baseball.

Causing a Commotion

Picture this: Alameda, 1988. A group of women exercising and practing two to three hours every work day. They're practicing softball, and they work darn hard at it. The team is comprised of seventeen team members, but only nine play at a time.

Tracy Desiderio plays first base and has been on the women's softball team during her four years at Alameda High. "Playing this sport or any sport teaches you to work well with others and to learn to compromise," said Tracy.

Many of the players will tell you that after putting 100% worth of effort into a game, that losing doesn't matter as long as your effort and pride are still intact.

"My future plans are to go to college and study law or medicine, and play softball on the side," said Tracy. — Mike Collier

I Got It! - Senior Tracy Desiderio catches that winning ball.

Step By Step! -Trish Lechler steals bases in between throws. She was also on the womens JV basketball team.

Racing To Catch That Ball! - Debbie Stevens is in hot pursuit after a fly ball.

Up and Coming Frosh

"There's a lot of potential. The guy's are really coachable. The whole team tried hard," said Coach James Nodora.

Freshman teams usually don't receive credit for their hours of hard work and dedication, but there was a lot of praise for the frosh men's basketball team.

"They were really dedicated. The team worked hard and really well together and they were cooperative with the coach. I think the team was pretty good and there will be a lot in store for the future," said Sophomore Chris David.

The players themselves were positive about their team.

"There was a lot of height on the team and we had a good inside game," said Marc Sison.

"It was fun being on the team. I learned a lot. It was a good learning experience. The coaches worked us hard, but in the long run, it was a lot better for next year," said Peter Mastora. —by Susan Lew

Confidence and Determination

Out of my way! - Inchul Hong tries to score with a great effort.

The JV Men's Basketball team was full of potential this year. As they ran out into the gym they looked ready to face the opposing team. There were some nervous faces, but faces that also looked determined to win.

"When we learn to play four complete quarters, we'll be a tough team to deal with," said Sophomore Alex Calic. The team members pretty much knew what they were doing and in what direction they were headed. They had the confidence and spirit that make up a good team.

One of their players, Lee Coral, moved up to varsity during the year. "He crashed the boards very well," said Joe Quinto, giving a note of praise.

As the team ran out into the court, they looked like they were ready to show everybody that they were with each other all the way. —by Susan Lew

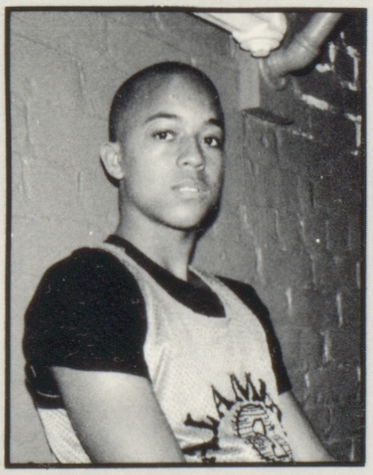
Stride to win



"I enjoyed playing basketball at AHS. I felt I was a part of something worthwhile," said Joe Frenchwood

As the league games quickly apporached the adrenalin level of the 1987-88 Men's Varsity Basketball team was lifted to new heights. With a preleague record of 8-8 the versatile team got off to a relatively slow start. The knowledge they gained while playing together before league showed as they cruised through the season.

"This team is motivated by the wanting to be a step better than last year's team and this year we don't have as many drawbacks as last year and we have much more overall talent," said Coach Felix Douglas.

Hopefully, next year with five varsity players returning and a great deal of talent coming in from the JV team the men's basketball team and Coach Douglas look towards another great year.

When asked about their performance, coach Douglas often joked and says,"It could be better!" —by S. Cates and C. Schreiber Shoot for Two!

The rain rumbled slowly through the snow. Inside, the Women's Junior Varsity team sat, sniffling, waiting to get to their destination: Twaine-Hart. Coach Henderson, looking at the van filled with basketball players, stricken with a cold, gave them a reasurring look that said "almost there."

Twain Hart was just one of the places that the JV team had to visit to strut their stuff. Yet despite the grueling practices the girls went through, they still managed to maintain a sense of esprit de corps, spirit of the troops.

"It looked pretty tough," said Sophomore Susan Lew as she watched them practice. "But if it's something they enjoy, it's worth it."

With team members like Sophomore Tyese Fulgham and Freshman D'Karla Davis, the team worked well together and had fun while they were at it.

"It was hard at first," said Carol Seto, sophomore. "But the more I practiced, the more fun it became." —by Precious Costales

Moving Up The Ladder

5! 4! 3! 2! 1! And the lady Hornets win again. "This year we're certainly comparible to other teams. Every game could go either way. If we play our game and cut down unforced errors, no team will have an easy go at us," said team member Dana Murray. The hornets beat their opponents by using teamwork and some great shooting from the floor.

Surprisingly there were a lot of college scholorships offered to good basketball players. Kelsey Kline and Shanon Payne, two of Alameda High's bright stars, were looking forward to receiving a few offers.

"I love the sport itself. I also consider it a privilege to play Kelsey and Shanon and everybody on the team. It's really fun," said Dana Murray when asked what she enjoyed most about playing on the team.

Dumbfounded, the contestants stared blankly at our host, Alex Traveck on Jeopardy until miraculously a contestant called Bronson exclaimed:

"What is soccer?"

"Way to go, Bronson," I said.

Soccer has come a long way since star Brazilian player Pelé scored his one thousandth goal on November 19, 1970. While the sport is rapidly gaining popularity in the US, the spirit is alive and well at AHS.

Coach Mike Frauenfelder, who guided the Men's Soccer Team through weeks of practices at Lincoln Junior High, was quite successful in introducing the fundamentals of the game.

"I like his style," said Matt Brewer, sophomore. "If you do something wrong, he'll help you improve instead of making the same mistake again.

If we had more people, we could've had a JV and Varsity team."

"Our team is the best it's ever been, winning this many games have been very inspiring," said Senior Kristen Lyman.

Is '88 the best?

Women's Varsity Soccer Coach, John Maiers, thought that four must be a charm. "In our fourth year of a woman's varsity team this was the best team ever, without a doubt and is steadily improving. Next year's team should be even better," said Maiers.

"I'm looking forward to next year. The majority of the team will be experienced upperclassmen. Mr. Maiers was a great encourager when we were down, that's helpful. The team was also encouraging. If something went wrong, they would bring you up when you're feeling down," said Michelle Gilchrist.

Out of this entire varsity squad, there were only three seniors. They were Kristen Lyman, Catherine Dickson, and Tracey Finger. "These three dedicated captains had great responsibilities and were examples of good leadership," said Maiers. —by Craig Moraes

The Rawest Tennis Team

"I think this will be the best team in the history of Alameda High School," said Tennis Coach Dave Fairfield.

Coach Fairfield had good reason to be optimistic for the tennis team. This year, the tennis team was led by Felix Gomez and Marc Scates. Scates was known as el numero uno in Northern California as was invited to play in the 1988 Olympics.

Among the five team members who are top-ranked in Northern California, there are three outstanding freshman: Alan Alvistar, Sean Martin, and Sidney Wee. Even before the season started they were invited to play at the first US High School Tennis Championship in North Carolina.

"I think this has got to be the rawest tennis team anywhere. If they mess with the best, they will die like the rest." said Eric Kapamas after one week of practice. — by Christophe Bertrand

Second row: Eric Kapamas, Dilip Nath, Alan Alvistar, Ho Kim, David Young, Graig Boring, Dave Fairfield, Marc Scates, and Felix Gomez.

Running Strong

Hoardes of people clad in spandex cotton shorts awaited. In moments they would attack the streets with their Nikes, Reeboks, and Adidas.

Images of grandeur come up when the AHS Track and Field Team were mentioned. But whether the competition be Bay to Breakers or the AHS track meet, track was not only running. Their events included long jump, shotput, high jump, and hurdling. Track also included hard core practive.

All team members were required to run three-quarter mile jog and forego a team stretch. For the 87-88 Track and Field Team, the practice did pay off.

Through skill and dedication, four lucky students made it to North Coast, in which the top four contenders from track and field events in Northern California competed for the title. Debbie Carpenter, Sarina Firing, Todd Best, and Zsofia Kondor represented AHS at North Coast. —by Precious Costales

Off and Running

Beth Hewson stretched while other runners psyched themselves up for upcoming events. Members from the opposing team glanced nervously at one another before the start of the cross country meet. Coach John Maiers surveyed the area as runners positioned themselves at the starting line. A few moments and they'd be off and running . . .

Days like these were common for the Alameda High School Cross Country Team. Long practices and heavy preparations were essential to improve their exceptional running skills. Practices were especially important to Zsofia Kondor and Marc Morales, who both made it to North Coast this season.

''The best moment I remember was beating DeLaSalle at the practice meet,'' said Jeff DeWolf, sophomore. ''DeLaSalle was one of the toughest teams to compete against.''

But nothing matched the thrill of victory the runners experienced when their preparations paid off.

Kelvin Shum, sophomore said, ''There's nothing like the feeling you get when you win a race.'' —by Precious Costales

Linking life With the green

"Fore!" echoed through the silence as he swung. The golf team oohed and aahed as the white orb sailed out of sight. "I like golf, I'll probably play all of my life, but I don't think I'll take it seriously. I'll probably just play it as a hobby," said Neal Fox, sophomore. Mike Appleton, senior seemed to feel differently about the sport. "I'll definitely play through college, and I'd like to make some sort of career out of it someday."

Everyone on the golf team had the same answer when asked "Who taught you to play?" They all answered, "My dad." But Mike Appleton had a different reason. "My dad played, but my brother was really into golf and I wanted to do what he was doing," he said. — Susie Profumo

Oak Leaf Exposed

In the unique environment of Oak Leaf, the school newspaper, there exists an onslaught of crisis as well as triumph. Louis Ah, co-editor, described the behind the scenes work of Oak Leaf.

"On paper, I have the easiest job in the world, but it never turns out that way," he said. Louis' Oak Leaf duties were writing and editing stories and overseeing the staff. At times, he had to stay after school laboring for hours on the paper or helping the staff members meet deadlines.

Louis pointed out that the nature of Oak Leaf's stories were starting to focus more on national issues as well as important school topics. "We're trying to get the students to think more about world issues."

Louis' main goal was to major in engineering and hopefully, later on, start up his own business. "I would like to be self employed," he said.

Dare to cheer

"Coundown, . . . " yelled the fall cheerleaders as they chanted in unison. If you every wondered how they did all their moves correctly, they might tell you that practce makes perfect and a little luck helps.

As they set up for a pyramid, each one of them whispered, "got to do this right." Making the perfect pyramid was a tricky business. "Time and effort are the key qualities to a essential pyramid." said Dytra Miller.

When Christin Collins was asked what she got out of cheerleading she said, "It's a combination release of energy and stress."

Each cheerleader agreed that they needed two lives: one life for freinds and the other life for cheerleading. "The funnest part about cheerleading was having fun at the games and at camp," said Christin Collins. by Mike Collier

Have you ever taken a second thought about a cheerleader? Many people don't realize their anger, joy, tears, and pain. Just picture yourself trying to entertain hundreds of people. All eyes are on you. Now you understand what a difficult job the cheerleaders had.

When asked which is more fun, fall or spring cheerleading, there was a difference of opinion. "I like the spring due to the weather and I enjoy cheering at basketball games," said Cybelle Keley. On the other hand, Shae Reilly said, "Cheering in the fall is best because of the football games, and Homecoming."

What did the cheerleaders get out of cheerleading? "We get to meet a lot of new friends from different schools," replied Tesha Holt.

"This was the first band competition the marching band has been to, and we won it so technically, we're undefeated," said the Music Director, Mr. Armen Phelps. The Macy's Christmas Parade took place on Broadway in Oakland.

The day was cold and rainy, and to add to the initial confusion were numb fingers, plastic coats, and missing gloves. However, as the day progressed, the sun came out, the rain coats were shed, the gloves were found, and slowly the fingers warmed up.

The new AHS Marching Band, after only three months of practice marched past the judges stand while one of the P.A. announcers exclaimed," WOW! Look at these guys go!"

The marching band took first place and $350 while the flag girls grabbed second place and 50 dollars.

Artists at Work

The 1987-88 Art Club consisted of an array of talented Alameda High students interested in all medias of fine art; from pencil and ink drawings to scratchboard, water color and acrylic paintings, print making textiles and photography.

The club members are encouraged to enter art contests and scholarships at each meeting. This year's project a contribution tio AHS is a life size mural on the second floor of the old building. The art club visits Bay Area museums and organizes weekend field trips to well known art colleges and planned a school art contest.

Mr. Phelps was music director for two years and he loved his work and students. "He's a very inspirational and a good teacher," said Jennifer Williams a second year student.

Take A Hike

What started out to be a large scale overnight trip to Pt. Reyes ended up as a small day hike on the trails. Rain had almost completely ruined this excursion began by the Outing Club, and it was only luck that kept it from becoming a horrendous, and slightly damp, catastrophe.

The foursome that decided to brave the trails with the supervisors, Paul Bentz and Chris Carmen, were not dissapointed. It was discouraging, however, to see signs that read: "Destination: 2.3 M." every mile and a half. Walking backward was the only way to eleviate the pain mounting in our feet. But alas, what started out to be a harmless six miler ended up as an excrutiating eleven to twelve mile wander.

As it turned out, the trip home had more bumps than the trails did. All of us let out a long, weary sigh of relief as the bus pulled up in front of the school. In the final hours of January 16, 1988, we realized that we beat the rain, we beat the odds, and we beat our feet like never before. — by Andy Brooks

Speak Out

Runaways, media, private universities, drugs, pollution, and ethics in American life, were just some of the controversial topics Speech Club members spoke on.

Speech Club was only three years old, and already they were the proud owners of many trophies and certificates. The Speech Club, under the new leadership of Janice Carroll, answered to many challenges by other schools.

"Ms. Carroll is the best speech coach I've had. She makes you feel good about yourself," said Mildred Simon.

Many students just joined Speech Club out of curiousity and then fell in love with it. "First I was just wondering what it was, and finding out I can win scholorships played a role in it too," said Seong-Hee Park when asked why she joined. Many students did not realize that the Speech Club not only gave oratory speeches, but they performed dramatic interpretations, went to debates and competed in other categories of public speaking.

American Field Service exchange programs have been recognized since 1947 for their excellence in secondary school student exchanges. Students had the option to engage in exchange programs for a year, a semester, or even a summer in 56 countries all over the world like Australia, France, Japan or St. Lucia.

As you can see even if one doesn't know all the countries, one could travel all over the world with this marvelous, fantastic, fabalous organization which gave donations to AHS since 1970. Of course AFS doesn't give donations to AHS, that was just a joke from the writer, me!

Fairfields's Finest

Everyday a tight group of students come together to learn Jujitsu, the "gentle way" of self-defense. Taught by black belt Senseis David Fairfield and Ron Beatty. The class not only learned about the physical techniques and mental discipline for this art, but they were also taught to incorporate the virtues justice, courage, benevolence, politeness, veracity, honor and loyalty, as well as self-control, into their everyday lives.

The class was not only limited to Jujitsu. During the year, the students were exposed to different forms of martial arts through exhibitons and instruction camp. One such camp, Danzan Ryu, in the Santa Cruz mountains was visited every year by the class. There, along with hundereds of other students from around the country, the Jujitsu class learned about the different styles and techniques of other martial art forms. — By Sherry Cortez

Up Close

On a windy, rainy Dec. 7, 1987, twenty-one Close-Up members convened with Mr. Haberberger at the San Francisco International airport bound for a Close-Up adventure in Washington D.C.

Those who went on the trip were treated to an intense week of learning, sharing, and fun. Each day began at 6 a.m. and was full fo a wide range of activities until 11 p.m. Activities included workshops, seminars, sight seeign tours, and an in-depth look at Captiol Hill.

It was an exciting week in Washingtion Congress and the President faught over the budget, the Supreme Court assesed its cases, and perhaps the most important event of the decade, the historical summit meeting between President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Close-Up members also visited Colonial Williamsbur, Virginia, a colonial town stuck in the 1770's.

Those who went on the trip were: Kim Blanksenship, Brian Carbis, Samantha Castronova, Marc Debley, Tracy Desideriom, Catherine Dixkson, Karen Gee, Denise Gremminger, Judy Jaber, Julia Lew, David Lynch, David Mckean, Jenny Porter, Matt Poger, Corey Sander, Deborah Schneider, Eddie Seelenbacher, Kantad Svendsgaard, Tessa Trabue, Marisol Schultz and Shannon Williams. —by Kantad Svendgaard

First Class- Deborah Schiender, and Catherine Dickson flying first class to Washington D.C.

Are you sure? - Seniors Jenifer Olsen, Shannon Aleshire and Kim Blankenship discuss the main topic of their paper.

To Valerie . . . With Love

"It has been my goal for the past two years to make sure that I graduate with my class. Also, my tutor, Connie Swyers, has made the school work interesting and her help and support have kept me going."

For the past two years, Senior Valerie Fraser has been on independent study while fighting a battle with cancer. She worked towards her goal of completing her graduation requirements with a strength not commonly found in one so young.

During her bout with cancer, Valerie discovered a great deal about herself. "I've learned that I can get through just about anything when I put my mind and inner strength up against it. When faced with a life-threatening situation, you learn how very precious time is. I've learned not to waste it worrying about what other people think of me. I've learned to speak up for what I want and to take control of and responsibility for my life.

Valerie will graduate among the senior class of 1988 and hopes to continue her studies at Diablo Valley College and become a chef.

Valerie has realized the value of friendship and family. "Most importantly, I've learned that it would be impossible to fight this thing alone. The love, support, prayers, and good wishes from my family and friends have kept me going and made me feel very special."

Because of her fighting spirit and courage, her strength and determination are an inspiration to us all. It is with great pride and affection that we dedicate 1987-88 Acorn to Valerie.

Crazy Creators

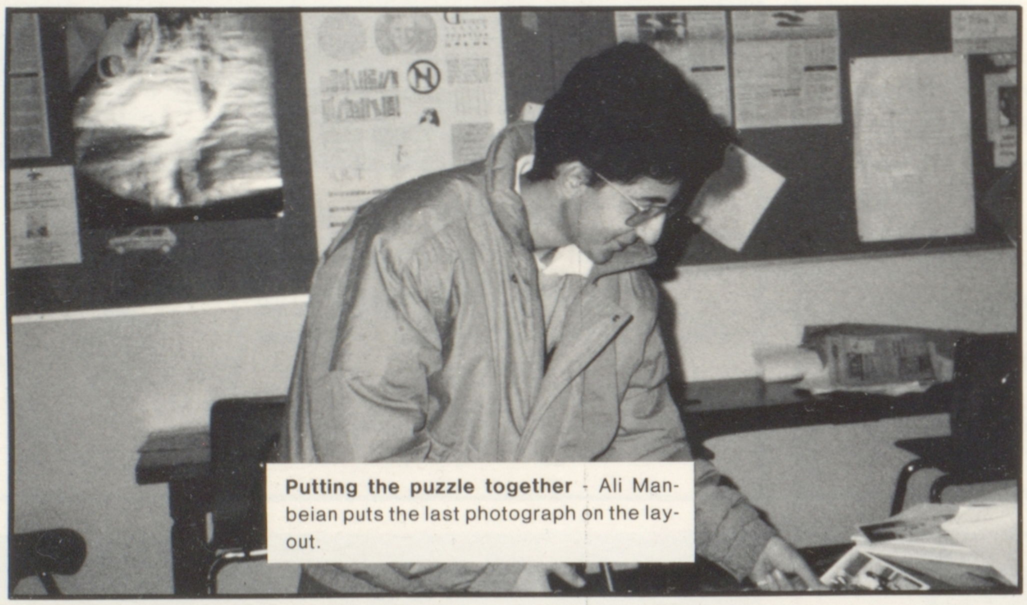
Agh! Where did my layout go? Where's the white out? Where are my pictures? Leila, will you type my copy? NO!

If you entered the yearbook room during any of the deadlines you would probably have heard one or all of these sayings. Deadlines were the most hectic part of the year, but during those times the staff would pull together and we met our goals.

However, life in yearbook wasn't always hectic. Who could forget Biff and Muffie's (aka Tim Folsom and Julia Berger) famous poetry readings, or the outings we had to sell ads? Or the time Lynnette showed up with pink hair? Well, that's why she's our little gem the truely outrageous!

Through all this we managed to accomplish what we had set out to do: create a yearbook that we could be proud of. Each page in the yearbook includes part of the person who created it. WE DID IT AND THANKS TO ALL! —Sarah Leslie

On strike - Joyce Kim is tired of all the developing that she has been doing, and decides to go on strike.



Putting the puzzle together - Ali Manbeian puts the last photograph on the layout.

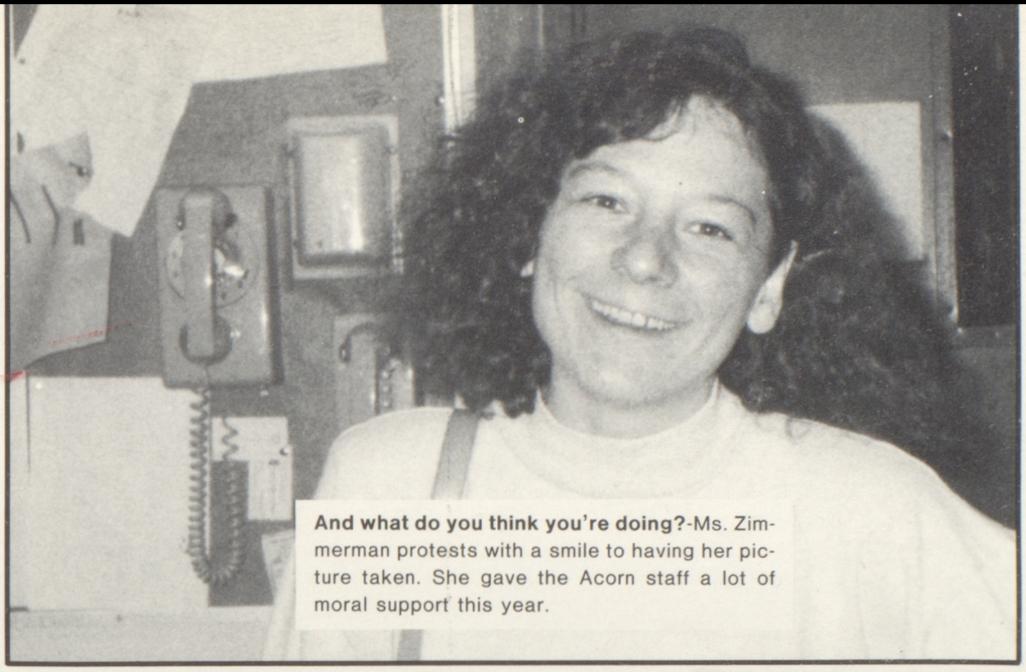
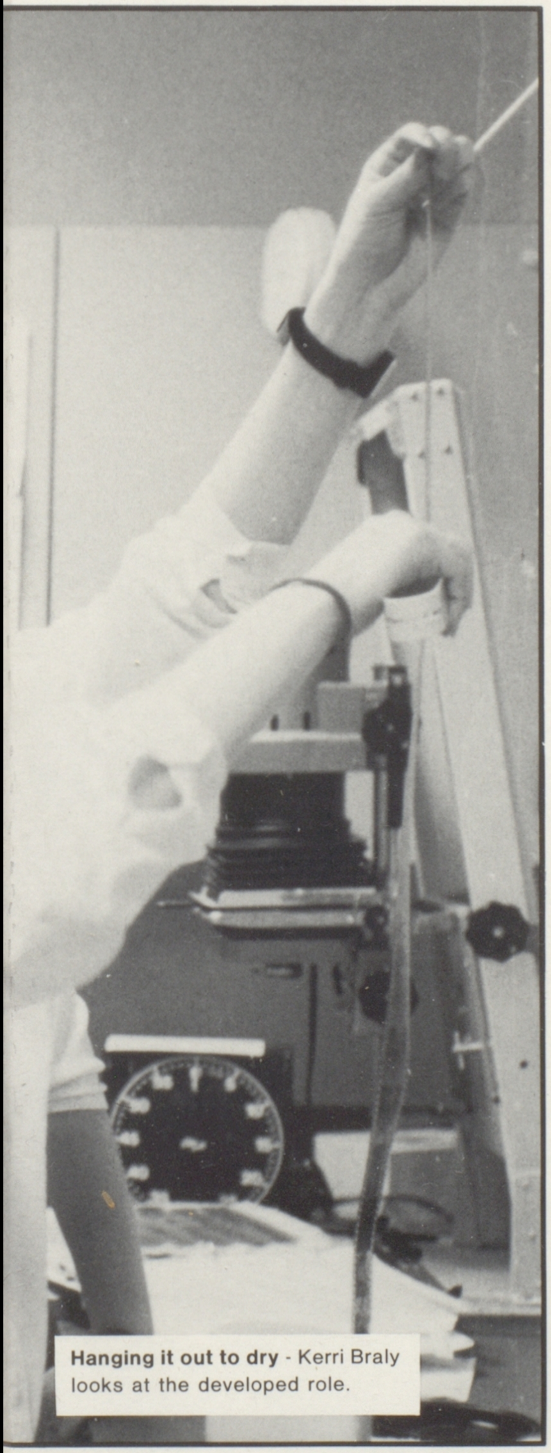
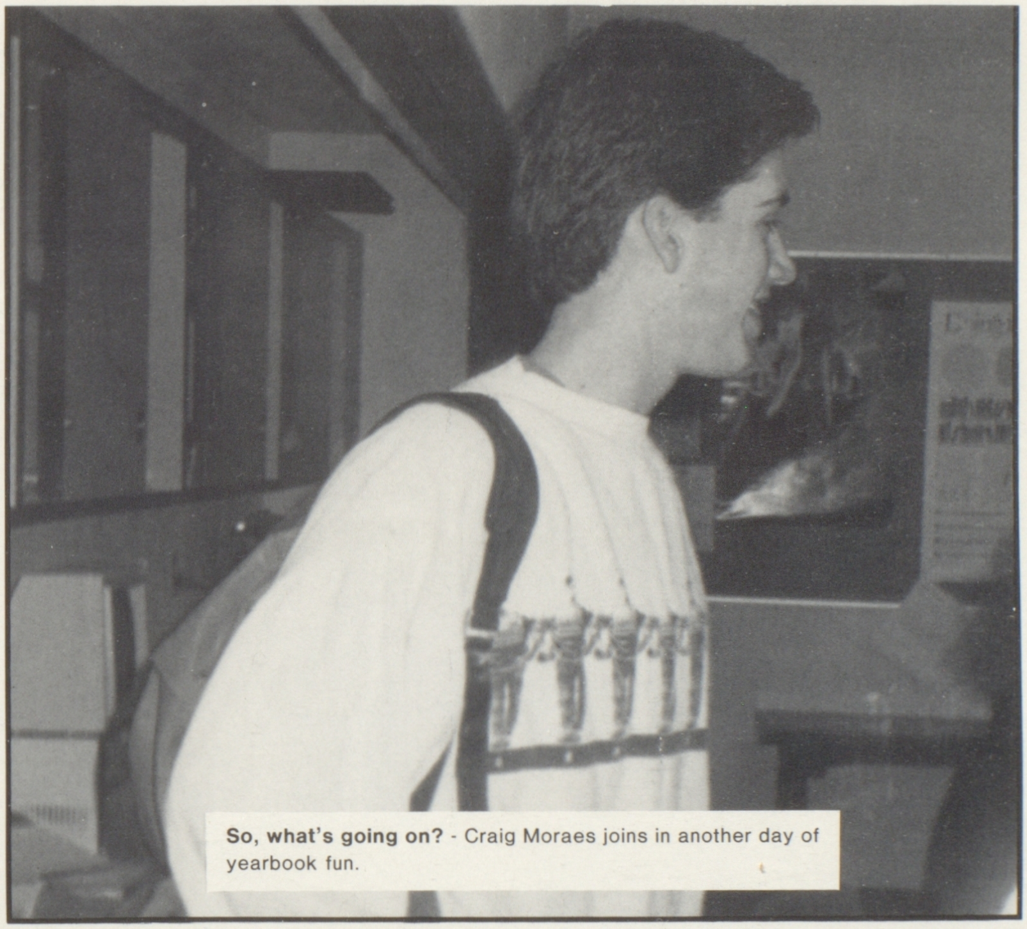
Fresh out of ideas . . . and coke - Leila Tajiri trys to find a solution to her problem.



And what do you think you're doing?-Ms. Zimmerman protests with a smile to having her picture taken. She gave the Acorn staff a lot of moral support this year.



Hanging it out to dry - Kerri Braly looks at the developed role.



So, what's going on? - Craig Moraes joins in another day of yearbook fun.

"D.J."

From the time you were born to the present you have always added happiness to both of us. We are so very proud of you.

You are the Greatest!

Love-

Mom and Dad

Ms. Zimmerman,
What can I say. I'll miss you.
You've been a great friend and I'll never forget you! You and I have been able to see eachother at our most stressed times and still remain good friends. You're a great yearbook advisor just remember I'm going to take the job over when you're old & grey. Love always Sarah

Mama Zim,
Buy your yearbook early next year!
I am the original little Snot! Who'll yell with and at you for your aggrivation? I'm gone but hopefully not forgotten. Next year's staff will definately be different - Hopefully better to your health. Doc, thanks for letting me be late due to deadlines. I wish you both luck - Leila

"This school year was better because I got a chance to meet a lot of new people. And I have also learned a lot more about myself. AHS students seemed to be more serious about things."

Maggie Hobson, 9th

"Last year was better despite being a freshman because it was easier. I had less homework and more fun. I met a lot of new people and made new friends. Everything was more organized."

Liza Marie David, 10th

"My junior year is more challanging. My last two years are the most important towards my future."

Carry Patakas, 11th

"This is my last year. I'm psyched to get out and start my own life."

Anna Phillips, 12th
